A Brilliant Actress We Are Going Up Frightened Baby Bea Gen. Wood's New Ste

By Arthur Brisbane

LOS ANGELES, Feb.17—Minnie Maddern Fiske is ead. She began her career o the stage at the age of threeand ever since her work has gen as inspiration to the stagand to the public.

This generation will reli especially, Mrs. Fiske's admirable performances in t of the D'Ubervilles" and "Eky Sharpe."

An earlier generation pries to remember her as Maje Maddern, in her teens, crohing with the light of a age fire on her face singing "Inhe Gloaming." Minnie Maden honored her profession, oneof the most useful because it awakens emotion and stimulas thought.

You will be glad to hear ut men of sound judgment al cheerful about conditions. Pul Block, who owns newspapers l over the country, and, as l late Joseph Pulitzer used to s, "Leads the life of a millionai without its cares," arrived yeterday in his private car fro the East. He says all his newspapers report improved conditions, and he believes we shb be well on the way back to pro perity before the election 1932.

Charles Baad, manager of th Los Angeles Biltmore Hote who comes in contact with busi ness men from every big city says "They are all feeling better."

Hotel men will know what Mr Baad means when he says "They no longer come in and write their own ticket, but simply say 'Give me my usual accommodations.'"

George Young, publisher of the Los Angeles Examiner, invited the principal financiers of Los Angeles to meet Merryle Stanley Rukeyser, whose writings on finance are known to you.

Mr. Rukeyser, who studies business, finance and industry impartially, believes that we are "in the trough of the depression" and from now on shall go upward.

He reminded listening bankers that too much optimism must not be attached to the present rather violent upward whirl in stocks. Many "amateur baby bears" that were paying $250 a share for stocks in 1929 have recently been selling the same stocks short at $100, $50, and $30 a share or lower. At the slightest sign of recovery such as the one caused by the Glass bill, these little bears are frightened to death, and all "cover" at once, causing a rise partly artificial. But things ARE better.

An encouraging sign of business courage is the opening of another big store in Chicago by Sears, Roebuck, which seems to indicate that the universally regretted Julius Rosenwald did not take his firm's courage with him.

Gen. R. E. Wood, president of the business, selected by Julius Rosenwald, is a West Point army man, trained for fighting.

It would cheer your heart, if you own Sears, Roebuck stock, to know the kind of bargain driven by Gen. Wood in renting the big store. It would make old Mr. Leiter turn in his grave to know the terms that Gen. Wood, on behalf of his stockholders, wrote into that Chicago lease.

Miss Ruth Nichols, three cheers for her, flew up 21,300 feet, beating Clarence Chamberlain's record in the same plane.

Human beings are air-fish, living at the bottom of our atmospheric ocean, as water-fish live at the bottom of their sea. For a human being to rise 20,000 feet into the air is as though a fish living at the bottom of the ocean a mile deep should rise about 60 feet above the bottom.

Men have a long way to go to reach the top of their air ocean, then forty million miles through the ether to the nearest planet. They MAY do it, but probably human life and experience will end here, with hope of many pleasant things hereafter.

The largest Diesel engine ever built in America, only 3000 horsepower at that, has been shipped from St. Louis to Freeport, N. Y., to will work in a publicly owned power plant.

The shipment should interest the power companies, for the Diesel engine, unless choked off or circumvented in some way, may worry power companies presently, as much as automobiles and automobile trucks now worry railroads.

One inexpensive Diesel engine will supply power and light to a small community at ridiculously low cost, and one of the greatest engineers in this country predicts that within a short time isolated farmers will produce their own power and light, for less than it costs to run poles at present, thanks to small Diesels.

Dr. Boos Tells American Quadronal, Found in Organs, Is a Fatal Sleep Potion

Some of the mystery surrounding the death at sea of Elizabeth B. Cook, 20, Brooklyn heiress, was cleared up today.

Quadronal, the German mystery drug, a quantity of which was found in the victim's cabin on the S. S. Chinese Prince, and traces of which were found in her organs, was identified for the Boston Evening American by Dr. William F. Boos, noted Boston toxicologist.

Quadronal is a narcotic, containing chloral. It is used for sleeplessness, Dr. Boos said, the same as veronal, which Miss Cook frequently used. An overdose would be fatal.

GOT CABLE, THEN DIED

Identification of its nature substantiated the belief that Miss Cook took her own life, perhaps accidentally, after receiving aboard the ship, as she left Naples, a message falsely reporting the death of St. George Tucker Arnold, 28, the Boston engineer she was sailing to wed.

Despite Arnold's announced belief that his finiancee was murdered, a supposition shared by at least one of Miss Cook's relatives here, identification of the narcotic virtu-

3 NOW HELD IN WOMAN'S 'BILL' DEATH

Collectors and Suspended Attorney Are Arrested in Back Bay "Furniture Fatality"

Two bill collectors, who fled from the apartment of Mrs. Almina Anderson, 65, of 171 Hemenway st., Back Bay, as she collapsed and died in her daughter's arms, were arrested today on manslaughter charges.

They are Orville Ellsworth, 31, married, of Austin st., Cambridge, and John J. Sheehan, of Wilmington ave., Dorchester.

Ellsworth is also charged with conspiracy with Robert Goodman, suspended attorney, to commit larceny. Goodman was arrested last night. He ran the collection agency for whom the two men worked. Another charge against Ellsworth is falsely posing as a constable.

Police claim Ellsworth and Sheehan threatened to remove the furniture from Mrs. Anderson's apartment unless a bill of $28, owed by her son, was paid.

A mortgage note, which the son says he never signed, was shown to Mrs. Anderson. She insisted that the furniture belonged to her daughter. The men refused to leave until the daughter, Ruth, arrived home and the mother collapsed in her arms.

Following Medical Examiner Leary's report that death was due to heart failure, Dist. Atty. Foley asked police to look into the case.

Sergt. Louis DiSessa made the investigation and obtained the warrants for the three men.

LONE THIEF GRABS CASH AND FLEES

Daring Youth Makes Escape in Auto as He Loses Pursuing Police in Chase

A lone desperado, carrying no weapon, snatched $1200 today from Timothy Byrnes, 31, Charlestown superintendent of a chain of stores as he was entering the First National Bank branch in crowded City sq., Charlestown.

The bold holdup was staged on a stairway leading up to the bank branch on the second floor, directly across City sq. from the police station.

Byrnes, whose home is at 23 Irvington rd., Somerville, was taking the $1200 in branch store collections to the bank for deposit and had the money in a paper bag in his hands.

FLEES WITH MONEY.

As he went up the stairs a youth of 19 or 20 years, wearing a brown overcoat and brown cap, followed and snatched the bag at the entrance to the bank—then fled down the stairs into City sq.

Byrnes, shouting that he had robbed, followed down the stairs and chased the lone robber through Park st. to Joiner st., followed by Special Officers Patrick Fallon and Lindsey Lafford, who had been in the square and who commandeered an automobile.

In Joiner st. the fleeing youth leaped into an automobile in which were three other men. The car shot ahead immediately and whirled from Joiner st. into Charles st., heading down past the Navy Yard for Chelsea.

ESCAPES IN CHASE

Meanwhile Byrnes had been far outdistanced, but the chase was continued by the special officers in their commandeered car and by Patrolman Patrick Conroy and John Van Denburg, who had started out in a police cruiser car.

At Chelsea Bridge in Chelsea st., however, the bandit car snaked through traffic and left the officers far behind, although they secured the registration number.

Japs Pull Down U. S. Flag and Raid School

Shanghai, Feb. 17 (INS)—American Consul-General Edwin S. Cunningham was informed today of another attack upon the American Mission School of the Methodist Episcopal Church South by armed Japanese sailors last Friday.

This was after Japanese officials had promised Cunningham such an incident would not occur again, and Cunningham now awaits the Japanese excuse for the breach of their promise.

The school, located on Quinsan rd., in the Hongkew section, was seriously damaged as raiders looted and wrecked the premises, smashing furniture and windows.

John C. Hawk, head of the school, showed a representatives of the consulate about the wrecked building. He pointed out that he had nailed an American flag on the front of the building which was promptly torn down by the Japanese.

Hawk also was highly incensed over the boarding up of doors and windows by the Japanese.

The school had been raided twice before by the Japanese, who apparently sought anti-Japanese propaganda. The students fled at the first outbreak of the Shanghai hostilities.

SHELL KILLS 2 BRITISH SAILORS ON DUTY

Shower of Death Falls Into the Foreign Area; U. S. Marines Under Shell Fire

By DIXON HOSTE
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Shanghai, Feb. 17 (INS)—Two British sailors were fatally wounded today by a stray Chinese shell which exploded in the International Settlement along the Whangpoo wharf in the Hongkew district which they guarded.

E. T. Francis and H. G. Pryor, the wounded sailors, died shortly after they were hit by shell fragments. They were of the crew H. M. S. Suffolk.

40 MENACE MARINES

The shell was one of many which fell within the lines of the International Settlement. Between 40 and 50 wounded as they fell within the lines guarded by the American marines. There were no American casualties.

The firing was part of a heavy Japanese bombardment of Chinese positions in the north of the International Settlement, carried out during the night and morning as Japanese forces continued to land within the Settlement.

Seven Chinese were known to have been killed. The wounded were placed as exclusive of the British seamen.

MORE PROTESTS

All foreign consuls were gravely concerned over the constant falling of shells within the settlement, and they planned strong protests to both Chinese and Japanese authorities.

The shell which injured the sailors was one of six from Chinese guns, obviously aimed at Japanese warships in the river or at Japanese troops billeted in warehouses along the wharf.

One of the shells dropped only 20 yards from the British liner Carthage but brought no casualties.

BRITISH BOAT STRUCK

American marine headquarters said a number of shells fell within the northern borders of the International Settlement which marines patrolled and that two Chinese were killed and a number wounded during the bombardment. None of the marines was wounded. They said he shells exploded with great power and apparently came from the Japanese batteries.

A British river boat, the Suiwo, was struck by a shell and forced to make for the opposite shore. Some reports said 16 shells dropped on the docks along the Whangpoo.

EARTH-SHAKING GUN DUEL ON

Shanghai, Feb. 17 (AP)—Japanese and Chinese guns boomed away at each other today in an earth-shaking duel that had continued over from last night and the action was followed tonight by an announcement from Japanese headquarters that the Chinese would "be given one more chance" voluntarily to withdraw from the Shanghai area.

GREAT AIR FLEET.

In the meantime thousands of Japanese soldiers worked furiously at the new airdromes near their headquarters assembling the greatest air armada ever put together on Chinese soil. There are already 100 planes in the Shanghai area and every transport brought up more.

Observers expressed the belief that when the big offensive takes place it will bring the greatest aerial battle since the World War.

The artillery duel was followed by sharp fighting on a wide front today.

IRELAND AWAITS VOTE RESULT

Dublin, Irish Free State, Feb. 17 (AP)—Intense excitement prevailed in the Free State today as the people waited the result of the count of ballots cast in yesterday's elections, on which hangs the fate of the government of President Cosgrave.

Most observers expressed the belief that the margin for the winner, whether President Cosgrave or his rival, Eamonn de Valera, leader of the Fianna Fail, would be very small. Some of the returns might be delayed for days, they said, and the result held in suspense until these were received.

Carts drawn by donkeys, as well as automobiles and motor trucks were used to get out the vote, and they continued throughout the day to haul men and women, young and old, to the polls.

A two-year-old baby, whose name was inadvertently placed on the list, was carried to a booth and voted.

2 YOUTHS ARE HELD IN BREAKS

A boy's instinctive shying away from two policemen resulted early today in arrest of two youthful alleged store burglars in Brighton with possibility of a third arrest.

Patrolmen John R. Maher and Bernard Suzinsky were out in a Brighton division cruiser car when they saw a youth standing at a trolley stop, waiting for an early car.

They paid no particular attention to him until he apparently was startled at the sight of policemen in the car and ran.

A heavy foot on the gas halted the flight before many feet were covered, and police found that the boy, John McNamara, 18, of Arlington st., Brighton, had a paper bag in which were $27.

According to police, he admitted having broken into a chain store in Faneuil st., and the bakery of Henry Gillig at 537 Washington st., both in Brighton, and named Julio Leone, 14, of Arlington pl., Brighton, and another young lad as his companions.

Police went to the home of Leone and placed him under arrest, but at the home of the other boy it was said that he had not returned.

JAPAN CALMLY AWAITS DRASTIC WARNING FROM U. S.

NOTIFIED THAT STIMSON WILL SEND NOTE

Tokio Proceeds With Plans to Dispatch Great Army to Chinese War Zone

By JAMES R. YOUNG
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Tokio, Feb. 17 (INS)—The United States is preparing a stern note of protest to Japan over her use of the International Settlement in Shanghai as a base of operations against the Chinese, Foreign Minister Kenkichi Yoshisawa was informed today.

In a cable from Ambassador Debuchi in Washington, Yoshisawa was told that Henry L. Stimson, American secretary of state, would hold Japan responsible if Chinese forces should also use the Settlement as a base of operations and loss of American lives or property resulted.

Debuchi reported Stimson was seeking the co-operation of France and Great Britain. The Japanese ambassador to Washington revealed he had had a series of conferences with Stimson and that Stimson had remained adamant, refusing to give in to arguments Debuchi set forth.

JAPANESE ULTIMATUM

Despite this word of another warning from the Western powers, Japan continued with her plans.

The foreign office instructed Mamoru Shigemitzu, Japanese minister to China, and Lieut.-Gen. Ueda, commanding the Japanese army in Shanghai, to deliver an ultimatum to Gen. Tsai Ting-Kai, in command of the Chinese 19th route army, demanding his withdrawal at least 20 kilometers (about 13 miles) from the boundaries of the International Settlement.

The ultimatum is to be delivered within a week, giving the Chinese 24 hours from time of delivery in which to act. If they refuse the Japanese will reply with force.

At the same time an ultimatum will be served on Mayor Wu Te-Chen, demanding him that the Japanese demands of January 28 were not fulfilled.

PEACE PARLEYS FAIL

This second ultimatum leaves a road to possible negotiations, in which it was said Japan would not object to having representatives of other powers concerned participate, in an attempt to persuade the Chinese to leave the Settlement boundaries.

The foreign office took its action following receipt of a message last night from Shigemitzu stating he regretted to report that all hope had been abandoned of obtaining a peaceful settlement of the difficulties or peaceful withdrawal. This was true despite the good spirit of the foreign consular officials, who attempted to have the Chinese accede to certain of the Japanese demands, Shigemitzu reported.

Russia Second Only to U. S. in Oil Output

Washington, Feb. 17 (AP)—Soviet Russia, during 1931, stepped into second place as a producer of crude petroleum, although the world output decreased approximately 40,000,000 barrels.

The United States continued to lead with 850,275,000 barrels, or 62.1 per cent of the world production. In 1930 the United States produced 898,911,000 barrels. Soviet Russia produced 161,900,000 barrels compared with 123,585,000 in 1930.

said the Chinese directed the heaviest artillery fire they had used thus far on the Japanese positions in Liuho, causing many casualties and doing considerable material damage.

JAP ULTIMATUM

Later in the day Captain S. Tomita, spokesman for the Japanese headquarters, said an ultimatum would be issued to the Chinese "in the very near future," demanding their withdrawal from Shanghai and that the expected big Japanese attack would not take place unless this ultimatum was disregarded. He characterized reports that the major offensive would start tonight or tomorrow "premature."

The battle today fought along a line reaching from Chapei to Kiangwan, half way to the Woosung forts. The Chinese bombardment, which was described as so severe by the Japanese, was accompanied by sweeping rifle and machine gun fire. The Chinese were not budged from their positions by the Japanese bombardment.

THUNDEROUS NIGHT

The fighting followed a thunderous night during which most people in the International Settlement were kept awake, as the rapid and mighty explosions shook the city.

Chinese Put New Troops in Line

Universal Service Special Radio
Shanghai, Feb. 17—The 9th Chinese division, today brought into the Chinese lines to reinforce the 19th route army, has fought side by side with the 19th army before. Both armies are made up of Cantonese, and have battled the Communists in Kiangsi.

reply to the Japanese guns was feeble, as might be expected from the difference in artillery equipment. The Great Northern cable also was reported cut, so that an emergency connection had to be established.

Five Chinese troop trains arrived at West Chenju station from Nanking, and Japanese airplanes promptly appeared overhead and carried out a terrific bombardment of the soldiers.

The American-owned Park garage, situated on North Szechuen road, near Seott road, inside the Japanese defense lines, was one of many buildings completely destroyed by fire resulting from Chinese shells.

These shells also destroyed the British Llewellyn aerated water company's works on North Szechuen road.

Morphine on Ship

New York, Feb 17 (AP)—Forty-seven tins of concentrated morphine, valued at from $3000 to $7000, were found in the aft stewards' quarters of the Ile De France several hours before she sailed, by a harbor customs squad.

12,000 Slain in Shanghai Warfare

Shanghai, Feb. 17 (US)—It is estimated that three or four civilian non-combatants, including many women and children, have been killed to every soldier and marine killed so far.

The total number of dead in the fighting forces of both sides is placed at not more than 3000.

There is no way of ascertaining the number of civilians killed from the Japanese shelling or aerial bombing of densely populated Chapei, or how many are still in the ruins, but rough estimates run between 9000 and 12,000.

TARDIEU QUITS ARMS PARLEY

Geneva, Feb. 17 (AP)—The disarmament conference reconvened today with the French benches empty, except for a single observer.

Andre Tardieu, minister of war and head of the French delegation until the Laval cabinet fell yesterday, said he expected a long cabinet crisis and it was uncertain when he would return to Geneva, if at all.

He planned to return to Paris at once by automobile with Paul Reynaud, minister of colonies.

Joseph Paul Boncour, who will head the remnants of the French delegation, remained at his hotel.

At today's session, Baron Trio-Koshinen, Finland's minister of foreign affairs, urged demilitarization of frontiers.

Foreign Minister Ohka of Rumania warmly endorsed the French plan to support the League of Nations and suggested revision of school books to eliminate incitement to war.

Burglars Get All Dollar Day Profits

Chicago, Feb. 17 (AP)—It was dollar day in William Kassin's clothing store, but William didn't get any of the dollars.

Two bandits drove up just at closing time last night and took the $600 taken in during the day. Then they loaded his entire stock, valued at $6000 into their automobile.

Kassin intended his dollar sale as a "going out of business sale" but he won't have to bother about that now.

MAY HOLD JAP FOR LOSSES

Washington, Feb. 17 (INS)—The United States government is seriously considering the question of holding Japan legally responsible for damage to American life or property in Shanghai, it was stated on responsible authority today. Property damage in Shanghai has been enormous, and foreign property, including American, has suffered along with the rest.

As yet no note has been drafted for dispatch to Japan on this subject, and none is in the course of preparation for the present. As yet no formal representations have been made either at Tokio or to the Japanese ambassador, Katsuji Debuchi, in Washington.

"Reds" Honor Slain Springfield Youth

New York, Feb. 17 (AP)—The body of Harry Simms, 18, of Springfield, Mass., organizer for the National Miners' Union, who was killed in Harlan, Ky., arrived at Grand Central Terminal today and was taken to the headquarters of the Young Communists' League of America to lie in state.

A Communist demonstration planned to coincide with the arrival of the body was deferred through a mixup in arrangements. As the hearse bearing the body of Simms passed the Pennsylvania station the Young Communists fell in behind and were joined by about 1000 others. The procession moved through the garment district, thronged with strikers.

Nippon Troops Face Hard Battle in Swamplands That Encircle Shanghai

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND
Universal Service Special Cable

Shanghai, Feb. 17.

The Chinese defenders at Kiangwan are taking advantage of the many creeks and swamps, building positions there that the Japanese tanks cannot approach without being mired out of commission. Foreign observers believe the Japanese face a difficult task unless outflanking moves are undertaken.

It was estimated that about 20,000 Japanese soldiers and marines were in the trenches today with about 20,000 more, including bluejackets, in readiness to be rushed

Amid the Ruins of War the British Flag Stays Up

Shanghai, Feb. 17 (US)—The British flag over the Hotel Wosung Fort is still flying defiantly, although all the other buildings round about are smashed and battered. Capt. Frederick Davies, 80-year-old British naval veteran, proprietor of the hotel, told the Japanese to "sang away" but he would not get out because his place in British up to the front to take over the first line when the main army advanced.

CHINESE FORCE GROWS

Chinese sources reported that the ninth division of the Chinese army had arrived to reinforce the 19th route army, and were moving up under cover of darkness in motor trucks. It was also said that the 47th division, Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek's "own," was enroute from Nanking to reinforce the Chinese lines at Woosung creek, west of the demolished fort.

With these preparations fairly complete, general belief especially among the vast Chinese population is that major hostilities will begin at any minute. No official confirmation of that intention on the part of the Japanese can be obtained.

Prominent Japanese tell me that the soldiers and Japanese civilians in Shanghai are pressing for the attack test, if the Chinese troops are permitted to withdraw without being defeated. "The Chinese will look down upon the Japanese."

TOWN LEVELED

Japanese Minister Mamoru Shigemitzu today took exception to the term "Japanese offensive," declaring that any hostilities would herald the beginning of a Japanese defensive movement.

The town of Woosung is gradually being leveled by Japanese shells from warships, field guns and aerial projectiles, but the shelling has had little effect either upon the expertly camouflaged Chinese trenches and dugouts or on the morale of the Chinese soldiers.

Japan is tenaciously driving in the direction of making Shanghai a kind of "Danzig of the far east" under international control. Tokio is determined there shall be no boycott of Japanese goods in Shanghai in the future.

It becomes more and more clear that Japan's military plan in Shanghai is to break down the boycott just as the British government in India has marshalled all its power to put down the anti-British boycott.

Too Many Homes, Says Insurance Head

Washington, Feb. 17 (AP)—William M. Kingsley, vice-president of the Pennsylvania Mutual Life Insurance Co., today told a Senate sub-committee that he opposed the administration home loan bill on the grounds there was no immediate need for new homes.

"There is an over-supply of modern homes purchasable at lower figures and on easier terms than could be applied to new houses," he said. "Hence the latter would deflate and lower values, thus lessening security under mortgages now in good standing.

LEAGUE PLEADS TO JAP SENSE OF HONOR

Geneva, Feb. 17 (AP)—The League of Nations Council published today an appeal "to the supreme sense of honor of Japan," asking her to cease hostilities in China.

The communication, given to Naotake Sato, Japanese delegate to the council, for transmission to the government at Tokyo, said:

"The committee of twelve earnestly trusts Japan will admit her obligations and justify the confidence reposed in her by the powers of the world."

The council members said they could not recognize the validity of a Japanese occupation of China because of Article X of the League covenant, which guarantees the territorial integrity of League members.

"The Shanghai incident," the communication said, "has made a deep impression upon the public opinion of the world. It has exposed the lives and property of many citizens to danger, augmented the world's present economic depression and threatens to menace the good progress of the disarmament conference now in session."

It requested the council's note of January 29 to the effect that "cooperation and mutual respect only can secure the maintenance of international relations and that economic or military forces cannot bring about any permanent solution of the problem."

"So long as the present situation continues," the note said, "the discord between the two countries will be aggravated endangering the creation of a situation unfavorable to the status of the world at large."

BRITAIN MOVES CAREFULLY TO AVOID WAR

Sir John Simon in the House of Commons Bombarded by Laborites

By LINTON WELLS.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, Feb. 17 (INS)—The British Government is moving cautiously with regard to the situation in Shanghai, despite the fact that two British seamen were killed in the resumption of fighting there.

This was indicated today by Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, in reply to questions from opposition Laborites in the House of Commons today.

Sir John declared the British government was not considering concerted international action and would not participate in a sea blockade of Japan, but was keeping steadily in mind the situation of the dominions with regard to Japanese aggression.

WAR TALK SHUT OFF

Sir John said Great Britain had protested three times to Japanese military authorities over use of the International Settlement as a base for military activities, the Japanese replying each time that the action was taken in defense of Japanese nationals.

"Are we powerless then to do anything more than we are doing?" shouted John Tinker, Laborite.

Cries of "do you want war?" from the Conservative benches relieved Sir John of the necessity of making a direct reply. He stated simply that the League of Nations was considering the full problem.

The gravity of the situation was shown today when Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald left a nursing home where he was operated upon for eye trouble and presided at a cabinet meeting before the Parliament session opened.

A stern Anglo-American warning to Japan, phrased as strongly as possible, is regarded in British government circles today as the one hope for averting the second world conflict believed brewing, at Shanghai.

With Tokio reports that additional Japanese reinforcements are assisted for Shanghai causing considerable perturbation in Whitehall, one high government official told Universal Service:

FEAR WAR CERTAIN

"We are personally beginning to feel that nothing as we find in late June and early July of 1914 —War is almost inevitable. However, we intend doing everything possible to avoid conflict with anyone.

But this "everything possible" is causing Britain much concern. Foreign Secretary Simon and Secretary Stimson are in frequent communication with reports prevalent that they are laying the groundwork for a new joint protest to Tokio.

REPORTS TO KING

Simon also reported the Shanghai situation to King George, Whitehall admitted further protests would be useless, but did not deny they would be made.

Last week the government feared conflict with the Chinese should they rush the International Settlement. Today it anticipates possible clashes with Japanese troops.

Yesterday's vigorous note to Tokio from the League of Nations council, Whitehall admitted, was inspired by Sir John Simon in the hope of avoiding the League's "day of reckoning," should a League assembly be called upon to settle the conflict.

Nation-Wide Drive Opened in Garner's Campaign for President

FEDERAL LEVY ON GASOLINE PROPOSED

Seven Per Cent Charge on Gas and Electricity Urged to Balance Budget

Washington, Feb. 7 (US)—Favoring a tax of one cent a gallon on gasoline sales and seven per cent on domestic consumption of electricity and manufactured and natural gas, Secretary of the Treasury Mills recommended $337,000,000 taxes in addition to those carried in the original Mellon plan submitted to Congress in January.

Downward revision in treasury estimates as to revenue from the original proposals and from existing law, makes supplementary taxes necessary to balance the budget, Mills told the House Ways and Means Committee late yesterday.

FAVORS EXCISE TAX

Mills said a general manufacturers' sales tax would raise $600,000,000, provided the law were properly framed. He did not recommend adoption of this tax but simply pointed out its practicability. Mills said:

"We hold to our original opinion that a limited group of selected excise taxes is a preferable method of raising the required revenue, not only from the standpoint of administration but also from that of basic economic considerations.

"Should the committee decide to substitute a general manufacturers' sales tax for the system of selected sales taxes, it is the opinion of the treasury that it would be possible to administer such a tax provided there would be substantially no exemptions, adequate administrative authority would be granted, and the rates would be kept at a very low point, say 2 per cent.

AGAINST EXEMPTIONS

"The yield of such a tax would depend upon its precise form. If constructed so as to provide for a single and not a pyramided levy, substantially without exemptions, the tax might yield about $600,000,000."

Special recommendations made by Mills to make up the $337,000,000 difference in budget balancing estimates, were:

1—An additional increase of one-half of one per cent in the corporation income tax rate, which should furnish an additional $17,000,000. This would make the corporation rate 13 per cent.

2—Further modification in the surtax rates to yield $50,000,000.

3—A tax of one cent a gallon on gasoline, estimated to yield $165,000,000.

4—A 7 per cent tax on domestic consumption of electricity and of manufactured and natural gas, estimated to yield $94,000,000.

5—An additional cent on capital stock sales and transfers, making the total 4 cents per share, estimated to yield an additional $11,000,000.

BACKERS SEEK SUPPORT IN ALL STATES

Texas Delegation Will Be Solid for Him; Speaker's Fine Record Is Cited

Washington, Feb. 17 (AP)—The Garner boom came smashing out as a national drive today, but the sturdy Texan stuck to his job as Speaker of the House of Representatives and refused to take any part in the movement that seeks to put him in the White House.

Formally, the two Senators from Texas, Sheppard and Connally, offered Garner as a Democratic presidential candidate, not as a "favorite son" of the Lone Star State, but as a statesman supremely qualified in national affairs.

They promised him the solid vote of the Texas delegation to the Chicago convention and forecast that his candidacy would gain wide support as Democrats all over the nation learned more of his service and character.

STICKS TO OWN JOB.

Garner said he had known nothing of the statement beforehand and emphasized that he had no authorized spokesman and that any statements on his behalf were purely voluntary. He would not talk about presidential prospects at all.

"My job is Speaker of the House and I am confining myself solely to the job of running this House," he asserted.

It is exactly the way he is running that job that his enthusiastic supporters offer as the biggest sales argument in their quest for Garner votes.

"He has been Speaker of the House now for only a few weeks," said the Texas Senators. "During that period the House under his leadership has attracted the attention of the whole country by reason of its prompt, thorough and statesmanlike conduct of affairs. His record as Speaker and leader is among the highest proofs of his splendid qualities of leadership and courage."

POINT TO HIS RECORD.

They recalled his 29 years in the House as service "distinguished for its breadth of vision, its political courage and its rugged and aggressive democracy."

"Mr. Garner's friends present his name on the basis of his worthiness, his democracy and his service. His interests will be advanced seriously and aggressively. They present him to the nation as a man grounded in the fundamentals of democracy, a rugged and militant champion of the great body of the American people and as a man eminently qualified by training and service to perform the exalted duties of President of the United States."

TEN ROUTED BY QUINCY FIRE

Fire drove 10 persons from the two-family house at 33 Albertina st., South Quincy, today; where flames swept from the first floor to the roof, causing a loss of $2500.

Mrs. Effie Bishop, owner and first floor occupant, discovered the fire and aroused her five children.

She then aroused the family of Raymond McLean upstairs, and firemen arrived in time to assist them out.

The fire started from an overheated chimney in the kitchen in the Bishop apartment. The Bishop children are Ethel, 18, Beatrice, 16, James, 14, Annie, 10, and Mary, 5, and the McLean children are Dorothy, 8, and Russell, 3.

TWO ARRESTED IN LYNN BREAK

A man who carries a typewriter—not a portable—in the early hours of the morning is suspicious in the eyes of Patrolman Michael Keenan of Lynn.

Patrolling on Eastern ave. early today Keenan noticed such a man coming out of the shadows of the A. Jacobs & Sons shoe factory, stopped and questioned him and then led him to the rear of the building, where he found a second man in the company office.

Both were arrested charged with breaking and entering, larceny and having burglar tools. They gave their names as Chester I. Willey, 29, of Empire st., and Wesley A. Bernard, 21, of Cowdrey ave., both of Lynn.

According to Keenan both men admitted they had attempted to break open the safe.

2 MILLION FOR FULL BONUS

Washington, Feb. 17 (AP)—Preparing for their drive before the House ways and means committee for full cash payment of the soldier bonus, advocates of the legislation will shortly file with the House petitions they say carry more than two million names.

The ways and means committee will open hearings on the bill introduced by Representative Patman (D., Texas) after it completes drafting a tax bill. Patman's bill would provide an issue of $2,200,000,000 in United States notes to pay off the remainder of the bonus certificates, about $1,400,000,000 already having been advanced in loans.

"We believe the bill will pass both houses by an overwhelming majority and over the President's veto, if it is vetoed," the Texan said.

LOUISIANA WILL BACK GARNER

New Orleans, La., Feb. 17—Mrs. Emile Bienvenu, of New Orleans, recently elected National Democratic Committee-woman from Louisiana, will go to the Chicago convention hoping to place the name of Senator Huey P. Long in nomination as the Democratic standard-bearer.

Senator Long attended the meeting of the State Central Committee here Saturday and put his slate through for delegates and got an uninstructed delegation without a hitch.

It is Mrs. Bienvenu's plan, together with the other delegates from Louisiana, to vote fro Long on the first few ballots and then swing to Garner.

$500,056 IN U.S. CREDIT LOANS

Washington, Feb. 17 (INS)—The first advance of cash for loans by the Reconstruction Finance Corp. amounting to $500,056, was disclosed by the treasury's daily statement for February 15, made public today.

Another move shown by the statement is that of $23,014,005 subscribed for stock in the Federal Land banks.

The subscription was made from an authorization by Congress of $125,000,000 for this purpose. The treasury may subscribe for $500,000,000 stock in the reconstruction corporation. The amount so far subscribed is $150,000,000. Further subscriptions will be made to the corporation and to the Federal Land banks soon.

READY FOR HOP TO SO. AMERICA

Portland, Me. Feb. 17—The first confirmation of a rumored flight by plane from Old Orchard Beach to South America was given today when 1000 gallons of gasoline were delivered at the hangar of Capt. Harry Jones, veteran flier.

It was learned from neighbors that a pilot was expected some time today from New York. The utmost secrecy has been maintained in the preparations for the proposed flight.

When asked concerning the flight Capt. Jones merely smiled and said:

SEEK POPE BOMB PLOTTERS HERE

New York, Feb. 17 (INS)—Government operatives were closing in today on the headquarters of an international bombing gang, believed to be responsible for recent outrages throughout the country and the planting of explosives in the Vatican at Rome an din the villa of Pope Pius.

Twenty-five men, investigators for the Department of Justice and the Postoffice Department, are concentrated in Newark, N. J., which is not far from the lair of the ring somewhere in northern New Jersey.

Statements by federal agents linked beyond doubt the Easton, Pa., depredation, in which two men were killed, and the bomb that was snatched from the chancel rail in historic St. Peter's in Rome where Premier Mussolini prayed.

A gigantic anti-Fascist plot, with its origin in the United States, is responsible, and one important clue was being traced today in Detroit.

'Poison Pen' Writer Gets Long Sentence

Woodsville, N. H., Feb. 17—At Grafton County Superior Court, Judge Elwin L. Page sentenced Russell Saulnier, 20, of Campton, who pleaded guilty to writing threatening letters, to serve from five to 10 years in State's prison.

He was accused of having written such letters to two citizens of Campton threatening to do them bodily injury unless they came across with a certain amount of money.

ENGINEER CALM ABOUT NEW FORTUNE

Although he was richer by $129,000, Clarence S. Flandreau, 50, of South Braintree, a civil engineer for the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad for 21 years, went about his duties at the South Station today as calmly and as modestly as before he inherited a fortune from his father.

The legacy is half of the residue of the estate of his father, George D. Flandreau of New Rochelle, N. Y., who died last March.

Flandreau's career with the New Haven Railroad began in 1903, the year he was graduated from New York University with high scholastic honors. He was elected to Phi Beta Kappa during his senior year at N. Y. U.

After a year with the railroad at the New Haven office, he went to the engineering department of New Rochelle and spent six years there. Then he came back to the railroad and has been there ever since.

A transit expert, he has at various times been a track supervisor, with nearly 200 miles of track maintenance under his direction. Flandreau and his wife have lived in South Braintree for three years. They have no children.

16,867 JOBS ON FIRST DAY OF DRIVE

New York, Feb. 17 — The national campaign to obtain 1,000,000 jobs resulted in 16,867 men and women being placed in positions on the first day, headquarters figures showed.

The first day's results were based on reports received up to noon yesterday.

Connecticut: Stamford 5, Old Lyme 5.

Maine: Orono 6.

Massachusetts: Concord 10, Fall River 136, Boston 12.

New Hampshire: Manchester 200, Berlin 9, Keene $10,300 in work relief.

New York: Danville 2, Sayville 1, Norwick 44, Newburgh 11, Pough, keepsie 12 jobs and $10,000 in work relief, New York city 32.

The campaign was undertaken by the American Legion, the American Federation of Labor, the Association of National Advertisers and the Legion Auxiliary. Field committees have been organized throughout the country to canvass employers for additional jobs.

Court Orders Ten Lashes Each for 3 Offending Boys

Woodbury, N. J., Feb. 17 (AP)—"What you boys need," said Recorder Frank Johnson to three youngsters before him for breaking a theater lock "is a good thrashing."

Franklin Heiser, 16; Norman Redfield, 15, and William Elliott, 12, shifted uneasily. They tugged awkwardly at their caps.

"Ten lashes each," said the recorder.

FIRE ROUTS 8 AT HAVERHILL

Haverhill, Feb. 17—Fire drove out Mr. and Mrs. John F. Madden and six children from the house at 649 Primrose st. today. Damage was estimated at $1500.

Mrs. Madden discovered the fire when she opened the cellar door and was enveloped in smoke. She aroused the others and they went to a neighbor's home.

Madden is a clerk at the main postoffice.

CHILD HEIRESS FIGHTS SUIT

"Mr. Cooper is just peeved because he didn't get the money. Why there's hardly enough to put Gwendolyn through school."

Thus Mrs. Ruth Hunt, of Scituate, mother of 11-year-old Gwendolyn Cooper, of West Newton, made answer to the suit for support brought against the child by her grandfather, Thomas Cooper, 80, who lives in Swampscott in a house belonging to Mrs. Hunt.

The money was left to Gwendolyn on the death of her father, the late Dr. James Freyer Cooper, who divorced Mrs. Hunt for desertion in 1925. Since her parents separated little Gwendolyn has been living with Mr. and Mrs. Samuel S. Taylor at 27 Taft ave., West Newton.

"Thanks to the market there isn't nearly as much as Mr. Cooper thinks," said Mrs. Hunt. "I shan't be able to send Gwendolyn to a private school as her father wanted.

"Her grandfather has three daughters, two of them married, and all of them able to take care of him. I don't see why the responsibility should fall on me."

His refusal to pay rent, Mrs. Hunt said, has caused her to procure an eviction order for March 1.

Thrill Hunting Dog Has a Free Round Trip on the 'L'

A large German shepard dog with a town house in Charlestown, who refused to give his name, today found life in the Bunker Hill district rather too confining for his cosmopolitan tastes.

Desiring to see the world, he boarded an "Elevated" train at Thompson sq., heading for Forest Hills.

The globe trotter, however, left his wallet at home and when Guard David I. Krouse demanded his fare Mr. Dog was hustled unceremoniously back to Thompson sq. after being confined in the car through the whole journey. Or maybe the free round trip was his idea anyway.

He has been on duty in the prison office and about the yard at the main gate for the last five years.

GARAGES TO BID FOR CITY CARS

Garage owners throughout the city, who for years have been collecting $20 a month from the treasury for the overnight storage of municipal trucks and sedans, will be deprived of such profits in the future.

The city will store its cars in garages submitting the lowest prices after next week, under an order being carried out by Acting Public Works Commissioner Christopher J. Carven at the direction of Mayor Curley.

The commissioner has advertised for garage owners to submit their prices before noon, Feb. 24, when the bids will be opened to determine where the city will keep 189 vehicles for which there is no room in the municipal garages at Albany st., in the South End, and Hancock st., Dorchester.

In the future the cars must be kept in the districts to which they are assigned. The commissioner is looking for stalls for 105 cars in the downtown district, 15 in Roxbury, 19 in Dorchester, 14 in West Roxbury, four in Brighton, nine in East Boston, 10 in South Boston, and four each in Hyde Park and Charlestown.

Today, in the real estate columns of the Classified Ads, you will find scores of opportunities for profitable investment.

ARMY AND NAVY MEN TO MARCH

Washington, Feb. 17—Congressman John W. McCormack of Boston has been assured by Secretary Charles Francis Adams of the Navy Department that the navy will co-operate in every way possible in the celebration of the 136th anniversary of the evacuation of Boston by the British, by having contingents of the navy and marine corps participate in the military parade to be held in South Boston March 17.

Secretary Adams said the forces available in Boston will include the cruiser Milwaukee, the destroyer Babbitt and planes.

IDENTIFY HOAX DEATH POISON

ally eliminated the theory of foul play.

An overdose of a drug she apparently frequently used is believed to have been the cause of death and a suspicion that the drug was "planted" in the cabin by a slayer now appears unwarranted, investigators said.

The presence of ether in Miss Cook's cabin remained one of the many mysteries in the case.

A solution of the puzzle that has proved increasingly baffling since the Chinese Prince cleared Gibraltar on February 8, may be reached tonight or tomorrow.

SHIP DUE TONIGHT

The passenger-carrying freighter heard Boston this afternoon and was due to reach quarantine in the low harbor tonight. She may not clear quarantine until tomorrow morning, and then proceed to her Charlestown dock.

Three separate "boards of inquiry" will concentrate upon the puzzle, either boarding the ship in the lower harbor or when she arrives.

Robert G. Dodge and Edmund B. Twomey, Boston attorneys, will board the ship in the lower harbor with Arnold to question Capt. Horace Uncles and learn the contents of the hoax message and its dateline source.

BRITAIN TO INVESTIGATE

W. S. H. Bernard, British vice-consul, and J. A. Branson, junior vice-consul, will also question Capt. Uncles and Asst. U. S. Atty. Hubert Thompson will determine whether the message originated in the United States.

The source of the hoax message, referred to in foreign dispatches as a cablegram handed to Miss Cook aboard ship by Capt. Uncles, has never been made known. Nor has its exact wording, which is said to have conveyed the false information that Arnold died from appendicitis, and advice to Miss Cook not to return to Boston.

Two pathetic notes were contained in dispatches from Gibraltar today. The first disclosed that a long tulle veil, which she may have planned to wear at her wedding to Arnold was found among the girl's personal effects.

The second made known that when her mother, Mrs. Mabel E. Cook, and sister, Louise, 18, paused at Gibraltar Sunday en voyage home, a lock of Elizabeth's hair was given to them by agents of the steamship line.

Washington, Feb. 17 (AP)—Postal savings on February 1 totaled $658,081,034 and for the first time in the history of the system more than 1,000,000 persons had accounts. Total deposits represented an increase of approximately $63,000,000 during the month of January. Deposits at the beginning of the present fiscal year amounted to $353,237,908.

PROBE INVITED BY HOWARD

An investigation of the State Purchasing Bureau was "welcomed" by Chairman Charles P. Howard of the State Commission on Administration and Finance, following his charge that Chairman Frank Goodwin of the Boston Finance Commission had found fault with the bureau to divert attention from conditions in his own department.

Boston Fisherman Washed Overboard

Reporting the loss of one of the crew, the beam trawler Loon, owned by the Atlantic Coast Fisheries Co., docked here yesterday.

Capt. Philip Colbert, the master, said that on the night of Feb. 4, while the Loon was steaming through Ambrose Channel on her way out from New York, Thomas Keough, 35, of Liverpool st., East Boston, vanished and presumably was washed overboard.

Graf Zeppelin to Fly to U.S. This Week

Washington, Feb. 17 (AP)—The Bureau of Commercial Economics said today a cablegram had been received from Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the Graf Zeppelin, saying if weather conditions permit he will fly to the United States this week.

The cablegram said Eckener hoped to reach Washington by Sunday evening to attend a meeting of the Economics Bureau, to be addressed by Lieut.-Comdr. Edward H. Smith, who will relate his experiences over the North Pole on the Graf.

HARVARD MEN MAKE REPLY TO FR. AHERN

Side-stepping a direct reply editorially, the Harvard Crimson published under a heading "The Mail" today two letters from Harvard men in answer to the demand of the Rev. Michael J. Ahern, S. J., for an apology for a recent Crimson editorial.

The editorial declared that the Spanish Jesuit order is "not incorruptible." Fr. Ahern, in demanding an apology for the Crimson editorial, asserted that if the newspaper's contention were true, then it followed that the Society of Jesus in the United States is corruptible, too.

HUMAN INSTITUTION

One letter, carrying the signature of L. M. Hertsch, a second year Harvard Law School student, stated, in part:

"It is wise to bear in mind the clear difference that exists between 'corrupt' and 'corruptible.' The Jesuit Order, whether in Spain, in America, or elsewhere, is an institution of humans. All human institutions, however, notable their probity in action, carry ever within themselves the possibility of decay, and hence are in the true sense corruptible.

"It may profitably be remembered that in the scholastic teaching which Fr. Ahern so capably expounds, one institution only, the Holy Catholic Church itself, is incorruptible, and even its incorruptibility extends only so far as is necessary to protect it from dogmatic error.

STUDIED UNDER JESUITS

"Myself a students under the Jesuits, no one could be more swift than I to bear testimony to the great work they have done and are doing. But a high appreciation of the present pure and flourishing state of the Jesuit Order is not inconsistent with a philosophical realization that it is not impossible that changing times an dthe fallible element of humanity can render the Society decadent.

"Indeed, the society, once at least in history, possessed so corrupt a body that the Pope himself pronounced its temporary requiem and disolution.

"It is to be hoped that the Crimson will offer neither apology nor retraction, but will give good example by treating the incident as closed."

DIFFERENT IN SPAIN.

Another letter, from Myron C. Strawn of the Graduate School of Business Administration declared that the writer is conversant with the Spanish people, and said:

"If the Jesuit Order here were like that of Spain, I would suggest its immediate destruction as a blot on the Catholic Church. If a certain man is of an evil nature, there is no reflection on his brother, who may be a religious and worthy man."

MERGER URGED OF N. H.-B. & M.

Hartford, Ct., Feb. 17 (INS)—Merge the New Haven and Boston & Maine railroad systems, permit the Pennsylvania road to retail its present extensive interest in the merged lines, and the transportation needs of New England will be answered.

Such was the gist of a report before the Connecticut Society of Civil Engineers from Prof. Howard E. Boardman, Yale railroad expert; Prof. Charles S. Smith and Prof. Charles A. Wheeler of Connecticut Agricultural College, the society's special committee named to survey the rail merger situation.

A single New England system would mean isolation for the states, the so-called Rhode Island and Van Sweringen plans would induce increased costs through duplication, and joint operation of the New Haven by two trunk lines would accomplish nothing in the way of co-ordination or financial strength, the committee reported in its refutation of other proposals.

Its own plan of retaining the Pennsylvania interest would mean financial strength, the committee said.

QUICKEST WAY TO KNOCK A COLD

Millions Say of This Proved Way You Feel Like a New Person Almost Before You Know It

If you want quick relief from a cold, go back to first principles and use something your mother does the business—don't start "trying" a lot of fancy ideas or remedies.

Get Hill's Cascara Quinine. A scientific formula made to do ONE THING WELL: to knock a cold in a jiffy, not to cure a hundred different things.

Take two tablets now. Then follow directions on box. Drink lots of water, too—that's all. Soon those mean, aching pains in head and body begin to go; the cold breaks up; poisons leave your system and you feel like a new person.

If it doesn't do that, your money back. Get a box now. You'll be surprised at the speed with which it works. Cost only a few cents.

IF THERE IS ANYONE IN THIS WORLD WHO NEEDS a relaxation party just now after two weeks of opera, balls and first nights, it is US. But try and get it. If we should give you a program of our typical day, starting at nine in the morning and continuing until two, three or four the next, the family welfare society would have us in its toils.

Katherine Thayer

Nevertheless, nothing could have kept us away from the opening of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," on Monday night. We enjoyed it immensely and our only disappointment was that the last scene was not between Elizabeth and Robert. WE would have gone away with a sweeter thought to remember. Katherine Cornell was an adorable heroine, with not a hint of the lady of the "Green Hat," which we think was quite an achievement. So many actresses remind one of former performances in their mannerisms—she was an entirely different person in manner, gesture and voice.

Another delightful actress, Margalo Gillmore, played the part of the other daughter, Henrietta, magnificently and Charles Waldron, as the tyrannical father, had us scared out of our wits. We had nightmares about him last night he was so realistic.

Mrs. James Jackson Attends

SEATED NEAR US IN A BOX WAS MRS. JAMES JACKSON and her beautiful daughter, Mrs. Winslow Felton (Rachel Jackson). We chatted for a moment during the intermission, delightful people the Jacksons. A youthful dinner and theater party came in including Miss Katherine Thayer, Miss Elsie Perkins and Miss Ellen Cushing with escorts. In the crowd that packed into every seat we glimpsed Andrew J. Peters, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Bradley French and Mrs. H. Parker Whittington.

Housekeeping

MRS. FRENCH INVITED US to tea yesterday to meet the fascinating Katherine Cornell, but a frozen radiator prevented. We hear she, Miss Cornell, is housekeeping in a little apartment on Beacon Hill and manages her own publicity in whatever city she plays in. Capable young lady.

First-Nighters

MISS MARIAN DUANE AND a party were among the first nighters and so was Louisa Vaughan and Mianne Palfrey. It was a smart audience but not so many familiar faces.

Plan for Dance

WE STARTED IN ABOUT relaxation parties which was prompted by some news we have about the dance being given by Kitty Talbot, Elizabeth Hovey, Ike Carter of New York and Jack Rice of Dedham. This little subscription affair was to have been given immediately after mid-year's at Harvard as "relaxation" for the boys, but the Charity Ball and the Byron st. studio dance made it advisable to change the date until Monday night, the 29th, at the Waterfront Club. It will be a very small and quiet party as the club holds only a limited number comfortably and the committee have had to hand-pick their invitations to suit the setting. It may be a Leap Year dance, after all, and we will have our ear to the ground for possible sequences.

Also Reno Bound

HAPPENING TO BE AT THE Back Bay station to meet a friend yesterday, we saw another tabby who told us she had just seen Mrs. Webb Hyde, the adorable Lucille, off for Reno, to join her friend, Mrs. William P. Blodgett. Do divorces come cheaper in pairs? The Hydes are a charming couple and we were simply surprised at the news. On inquiring what would happen to the children we learned that Webb would have them for the present. Their lovely place in Dedham will miss its pretty mistress but we have heard of so many reconciliations lately, perhaps she will turn about and join the family at Cohasset this summer.

Mrs. Webb Hyde

A Valentine

DID WE TELL YOU WE received a valentine? Bless her heart—it was from a HER—this is what the message said: What a whale of a chuckle I get out of your column, especially the mitten and hose episode. Thank you, Lili.

Opera Memories

OPERA-GOERS ARE STILL raving about the French of Vanni-Marcoux, the beauty and voice of Coe Glade in Mignon, and the marvelous possibilities in store for Seraphine de Leo. She will make a notable Leonora some day.

Off for the Beach

THE MUCH MARRIED AND divorced and remarried Mrs. Winthrop Slade has decided to move her handsome husband and three lovely children down to the beach for the summer and left this week for the South Shore. Heaps of personality, Mrs. Slade.

Cohasset Club to Give Play

An original play written by Mr. Paul Blackmur entitled "Silent Night," is to be presented by the Cohasset Dramatic Club, this evening in the Cohasset town hall. Another one-act play will be given, those taking part including Mr. and Mrs. George W. Benedict, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Benson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Boos, Mr. A. O. Barker, Mr. Howard Converse, Mr. Russell Dean, Mr. Harry Reed, Mrs. Lloyd Trott, Miss Parker, Mr. Maurice Blackmur, Mr. Ralph Cahouet, Mr. Philip Towle and Master Conover Fitch.

Mr. James Doyle, president of the club, is responsible for the evening's program, and Mr. Dean K. James has charge of scenery and properties.

BEST CONTRACT HANDS

A series of selections by bridge stars of the best illustrations in their careers of precise bidding and excellent play. No. 3—Willard S. Karn.

New York, Feb. 17 (AP)—A successful game contract after two passes and a belated bid on a four-card suit is among the tournament accomplishments of Willard S. Karn which other bridge masters admire. Karn was a partner of P. Hal Sims, his teammate of the "Wour Horsemen." The two would rate high in a consensus as to the game's best player.

The hand is an illustration of precise inferences in bidding and good play is the only way possible for success. The key to game was Karn's correct deduction that one of the opponents would have to take a trump trick, although the other opponent already had won the trick.

Here is the hand:

NORTH
♡—8
◇—K J 3 2

WEST
♠—K 2
♡—5 4 3
◇—A 8 6 5

EAST
♠—J 10 4
♡—A Q J 10 6
◇—Q 10 7 4
♣—3

SOUTH (Dealer)
♠—Q 8 7 6
♡—K 9 7 2
◇—None
♣—K 8 7 5 2

The bidding: South, pass; West, pass; North, one diamond; East, one heart; South, pass; West, one no trump; North, pass; East, two hearts; South, two spades; West, pass; North, four spades, the contract.

Karn knew that Sims, having opened the bidding third hand after the dealer's pass, must have better than normal cards. Since the opponents had offered hearts and no trump and he had a blank in diamonds, Karn reasoned that the best make of the hands of Sims and himself was in spades. The play:

Trick	West	North	East	South
1	5H	8H	AHx	2H
2	3K	2Sx	QH	7K
3	2S	ASx	4S	8S
4	KSx	5S	10S	1S
5	AD	2D	4D	8Sx
6	4C	10Cx	2C	2C
7	6C	KC	3Sx	5C
8	4S	3D	5H	KHx
9	9C	ACx	6H	7C
10	5D	KDx	7D	9H
11	6D	5D	QH	QSx
12	JC	5D	10H	QCx
13	8D	9Sx	10D	3C

Karn ducked on the fourth trick in the belief that West would have to take his partner's trick with the king of trumps. The finesse of the club on trick six was based on West's bid of no trump.

Maurice Costello on Road to Recovery

Los Angeles, Feb. 17 (US)—Maurice Costello, former film idol and father of Mrs. John Barrymore and Helene Costello, was reported today to be "considerably improved" from the cerebral hemorrhage which sent him to a hospital. Although his condition is critical, hope of recovery is held.

Harvard Moves to Reopen Hall

Anew attempt to reopen Memorial Hall as a dining hal lis under way at Harvard.

Circulars, asking opinions of students as to whether Memorial should serve as a dining hall for the legal men, whether smaller eating clubs are desired, or whether moderate-priced housing units are favored were distributed today by Calvert Magruder, professor of law and vice-dean of the faculty of law.

Some years ago the students were canvassed with respect to reopening Memorial Hall, but the response did not justify the experiment.

'GHOSTS' OF MANY ROLES

Recall the Long Stardom of Mrs. Fiske

Big Moose, N. Y., Feb. 17 (AP)—Ghosts of the roles Minnie Maddern Fiske lived on the stage sleep today in attic trunks of her big Moose Lake lodge. Cloth, spangle and bodice, they tell the story of her long career in the American theater.

Mrs. Fiske, who died Monday of heart disease, called her home in the Adirondacks "Veery Lodge," naming it after a melodious species of thrush found there. She loved birds, and the woods on the island are dotted with bird houses.

Packed in the trunks are the costumes of "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," "Becky Sharp," "Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh," "Hedda Gabler," "Salvation Nell," "Cyprienne" (of "Divorcons"), and even of little Fritz in "Fritz, our German cousin." She played Fritz in the company of J. K. Emmett. That was as long ago as 1870, and her career has been constant throughout the intervening years.

Deep among the costumes is that of Dollie, the child of "Chicago Before the Fire," with its memories of the old Theater Comique, New York, where she played the role in 1872; and of the little Duke of York which she played in "Richard III" at Niblo's Garden in 1871.

Recollections of John McCullough are revived by the costume Mrs. Fiske—Minnie Maddern then—wore as Prince Arthur in "King John."

Most of the costumes were worn by Mrs. Fiske in many parts of America, for she was an inveterate trouper and "the road" knew her fully as well as Broadway.

Peabody House Cast to Give Light Opera

Miss Jane Megrew, secretary of the board of directors at the Elizabeth Peabody House, and Miss Susan Bradlee of the drama committee, will be in charge of the Junior League ushers for the three performances of "The Mikado," one of the most popular of the light opera classics, to be given at the Elizabeth Peabody Playhouse, beginning tonight and continuing Thursday and Friday nights.

The Junior League girls assisting will be the Misses Eleanor Stephenson, Rebecca Vincent, Polly Richardson, Louisa Vaughan, Lydia Evans and Eleanor Fabyan. The girls have made their own costumes for this occasion.

Miss Elizabeth Scaife, Miss Betty Soule and Miss Jane Megrew will usher at the "Old Movies" to be shown in the Junior League ballroom this evening, at 8:30, in aid of the Wells Memorial Institute.

Death Takes Edgar Speyer

Berlin, Feb. 17 (AP)—Sir Edgar Speyer, 69, former privy councillor of Great Britain, who resigned his post at the beginning of the World War in 1914 after he was charged with disloyalty, died last night at a clinic here. Death followed an operation for a nasal trouble.

British newspapers accused him of being pro-German in 1915 and he resigned and went to the United States to live.

He arrived in New York in June, 1915. A short time later he was ordered by the lord chief justice to show authority for a claim to membership in the privy council and a hearing was begun in November of that year. It was decided he was entitled to his seat, but the matter was taken up again in 1921 and his British naturalization was revoked, resulting in Lansing called "a man without a country."

He was a prominent figure in the British financial circles and was chairman of the London Underground Electric Railway Company, which operates the equivalent of New York's subway system.

Senate Gets Protest on Judge Cardozo

Washington, Feb. 17 (AP)—A protest against the confirmation of Benjamin N. Cardozo of New York, as Supreme Court Justice was received today by the Senate Judiciary committee from William H. Anderson, general secretary of the American Prohibition Alliance.

Anderson, a former superintendent of the New York Anti-Saloon League, charged Cardozo was "unfit for the post."

CASE OF WALDO FRANK, THEATER GUILD OF MOVIES

By GILBERT SELDES

A MAN OF EXCEPTIONAL GENTLENESS of character, with a fine mind and a nature as sweet and clear as water, has been assaulted and beaten in Kentucky, and those citizens of Kentucky who merely made fools of themselves when they attempted to frame Theodore Dreiser may join the more active ones who have gone farther and attacked another man of international repute, Waldo Frank. His offense was that, with a number of other writers, he had come down to give food to starving men and women. It happens that those who starve are strikers, and the local gentry have for long felt that their district has become unduly notorious; not a kind word has been said for many months; conservative newspapers have been as forbidding as radical. But the bankruptcy of the local mind is shown more and more clearly with every action. Men and women have been jailed and their attorneys have been run out of the State; and now the writer, who has done most to interpret Latin America to us and us to Latin America, is slugged as if he were a gangster.

Gilbert Seldes

Not Injustice—Bankruptcy

One more injustice will not weigh the scale down—it has been down too long and too far. It happens that this particularly foul wrong was done to a man I know; I have seen him perhaps six times in the last ten years; I think that among his friends I am least capable of understanding his work, quarrel most with his philosophy; I rejoice in his friendship without enjoying his admiration. But, knowing him, I have felt the extravagance of violence—Waldo Frank is so removed from force, from bitterness and cruelty. And I have felt the shame which most decent men will feel at the pretext offered: That Frank and one of his friends fought on another "to give the appearance of being attacked," according to a Pineville editor, who admitted that he did not see the incident. A particularly vicious case of brutality in the third degree was recently explained in a similar way, an investigating commission smugly reporting that a suspect had beaten himself up. The attack on Frank was shameful in one sense; the explanation is humiliating.

Art and Popularity

"Superior" criticism of the movies has always proceeded in two directions. On one hand are those who want movies to be purely artistic, regardless of popular approval; they love abstractions in the pictures, and have only been right in one respect—that is, they know that the camera is the instrument which makes the movie move. The other line of criticism has been all in favor of popular pictures, with the single reservation that a popular picture does not have to be a bad movie. Events have proved that the men of the second camp are right. Almost all the financial successes of the past few years have been better pictures than the financial failures.

Two comments, one from a theorist and another from a practical man, illustrate this. In The New Review an Italian, Massimo Bontempelli, says, "I am unable to conceive an advance-guard cinema. The cinema's strength lies in its being a 'show,' which is to say that it must, first of all, fulfill a popular necessity. When the 'little theater' came in, the theater went out. The same thing happened to the short story." The implication is that the arty movie may destroy the cinema.

Mr. Wanger's Guild

On the other hand, Mr. Walter Wanger, whose ideas of the movies have always seemed to me exceptionally sound, said the other day that Columbia Pictures (an organization Mr. Wanger has just joined) could become the Theater Guild of the movies. At first blush this might seem an exceptional bid for pure art. But Mr. Wanger, if he was correctly reported, was choosing his words carefully. The business of the Theater Guild is not to produce artistic plays which fail; it is to produce intelligent and artistic plays and make them succeed. All the work the Guild has done would be unimportant if it had not managed its greatest achievement: The creation of an audience which will appreciate good plays. The real criticism of the Guild is not that, in the past, it has produced failures; only that its failures were not distinguished enough.

The first obligation of a movie-maker is to make a good movie. The financial pressure to show profit at the box office, is not a misfortune, because it keeps the arty people out of the pictures; it keeps the pictures at their proper level of popular appeal. The error lies in underestimating the populace. The movie patrons have proved again and again that while they still go to cheap and bad shows, they actively support good ones.

Get Going

The basis of a well-made movie is movement—i. e., action; and action happens to be the most popular thing in the world of entertainment. The bad talkies of today are those which substitute chatter about unimportant things for action; and chatter has never been popular. There have been films of unexampled popularity which were extremely stupid; but the films which ran a long course of success were the good ones: the serial adventure films like "The Perils of Pauline," the Western legends which Hollywood contemptuously calls horse opera, the great comics, the great Chaplin. I believe that no single silent picture ever grossed as much money as "The Birth of a Nation," which happened to be the best silent picture made in its time. And, for the present the gangster pictures, exceptionally well made, were extremely successful.

Create Good People

To create a Theater Guild for the movies is not to manufacture abstract and incomprehensible films to be applauded by the few; it is to make the current picture better and better, to devote intelligence to it without ever corrupting its popularity, and to create a steadily growing audience which will care for good pictures. Perhaps the ill-fortune of so many movie concerns has been due, not to the stupidity of the audience, but to the sound sense of the audience—sound sense in keeping away from the second-rate, in paying freely for the first-rate.

GLOBE-TROTTING IN SEARCH OF NEWS GIBBONS' JOB

FLOYD GIBBONS

Floyd Gibbons was in Shanghai before the present Sino-Japanese diffic ies, which he is detailing so graphically in the Boston Evening American.

The years following the war were busy ones for Floyd Gibbons and his headline hunting took him to all parts of the world. He drove across France and Germany in 1920 to cover the Kapp Putch. Then, when the Black and Tan troubles arose in Ireland, Floyd was on the scene. He visited Upper Silesia during the Korfany troubles, when the Germans and Poles were trying to insure majorities in plebiscites, and hopped over to Poland when the Warsaw government started its drive to seize the Ukraine from Red Russia. The Volga famine, Red uprisings in Vienna and the earlier attempts to depose Alfonso in Spain —all were covered by the noted correspondent. And aside from military activities, he covered the coronation of Pope Pius XI and led a caravan across the Sahara desert, from Algiers to Columb-Beechar and thence to Timbuctoo, from where he struck out for Australia and Shanghai.

TRANSFERS OF STOCK SOUGHT

Officials of Dist.-Atty. Foley's office have been seeking to discover how many stockholders of the closed Industrial Bank & Trust Co. assigned bank stock to the Standard Shares, Inc., shortly before the bank's closing, it was learned today.

This disclosure followed yesterday's startling revelation that Frederick D. Bonner, legal adviser to Bank Commr. Arthur Guy, was one of the incorporators of the Brotherhood Discount Corp., which subsequently became Standard Shares, Inc.

Among the witnesses who are expected to appear before the Suffolk County grand jury today as it renews the probe are Chairman Frank Donahue of the Democratic state committee, former Atty. Gen. James M. Swift of Fall River and Andrew A. Highlands, secretary to the public utilities commission.

Donahue was at one time counsel for the closed bank. Highlands was reported to have previously declined to divulge information possessed by the commission, which was responsible for Asst. Dist. Atty. John J. Murphy's fiery blast yesterday regarding the alleged "stalling" of certain officials. Swift's connection with the bank's affairs is not known.

RUSSIAN ARMY 504,303 MEN

Geneva, Feb. 17 (AP)—The Soviet government told the League of Nations and the disarmament conference today that the Red army numbered 504,303 men. The Red air and naval forces, the report said, had 28,000 and 29,000 men respectively.

The total tonnage of the navy was placed at 180,000, including 75,000 tons of capital ships, and the air force had 750 planes.

The ogpu (Soviet secret police) guards have 45,000 on its rolls.

Russia spent $645,000,000 on all its armed forces in 1931, the report said.

The data, required of every nation before it entered the disarmament conference, was presented by Russia some time ago with the stipulation that it would not be unsealed until the conference was under way.

DOUMER SEEKS NEW PREMIER

Paris, Feb. 17 (AP)—President Paul Doumer sought today a new premier of France to replace Pierre Laval, whose government fell yesterday after defeat in the Senate.

M. Doumer's conferences with political chiefs were hurried because of the situation in international affairs, and it was considered advisable to establish the new government with all possible speed.

M. Laval's cabinet was to hold over during the interim.

The belief prevailed a new government to survive would have to command the support of a majority in the Chamber of Deputies and at least "benevolent neutrality" in the Senate.

The name of Senator Joseph Paul-Boncour, a principal member of the French disarmament delegation at Geneva, was most prominently mentioned.

GIBBONS' LIFE OF THRILLS HUNTING HEADLINES

Editor's Note — Following is the sixth of a series of stories giving the "high lights" of the colorful and interesting career of Floyd Gibbons, now "covering" the Sino-Japanese situation at Shanghai for clients of International News Service. The stories are written by Henry Wales, himself a famous war correspondent and a "buddy" of Gibbons for a great many years.

Previous chapters have told of Mr. Gibbons' start as a reporter and how his mother aided him and have revealed some of his earlier hair-raising experiences, first in the "One Man War," then with Villa and later with Pershing in Mexico. Next, with Pershing in France, a German bullet shot his left eye away, but after the war he continued his thrilling and brilliant work. Now go on with the story:

By HENRY WALES

CHAPTER VI

Events moved rapidly in the decade after the war. Trouble broke out all over the map—all over Europe, and in Asia and Africa and the Near East.

Floyd Gibbons followed trouble everywhere. Occasionally he accompanied it, sometimes he even preceded it. He drove across France and Germany in an old army automobile in 1920 to handle the Kapp putsch.

Several times he dashed across England to Ireland during the "Black and Tan" regime and the Sinn Fein troubles. He visited Upper Silesia during the Korfanty troubles, when Germans and Poles were trying to ensure majorities in the plebiscite.

The next year he was in Poland when the Warsaw government started its ill-fated drive to seize the Ukraine from red Russia.

Came the Volga famine, and Gibbons was in Riga. The United States was preparing, under Herbert Hoover, to try to feed the starving population in Central Russia.

Maxim Litvinov was the Soviet minister to Esthonia. Gibbons talked to him, convinced him of the need for publicity to speed American aid. The two rode into Moscow in the minister's private car attached to the international train.

Floyd was one of a party of newspaper correspondents who were taken to the stricken regions by the Communist authorities. The inspection trip was to last several weeks.

Gibbons saw enough starvation and misery in half that time to give him his story. He saw the corpses of men, women and children, stripped naked—the survivors needed their ragged clothing and boots. He saw the bodies piled into great funeral pyres and burned. It was impossible to dig graves to bury them in the frozen ground.

So Gibbons quit the official investigation party. He left them flat without warning—he wanted no rival correspondent to accompany him—and made his way alone and without credentials, across Russia to Moscow. There a telegraph wire was open.

He scooped the world with that series, wrote out the whole story, and had it published before his confreres got back.

"What I saw of the conditions of a few hundred thousand people in a tour covering a couple of thousand miles was enough," he explained afterward, "I didn't need to see a couple of million more and travel all over the country to confirm the famine."

He was in the Ruhr when the French and Belgians occupied the Westphalian industrial region militarily to try to force Berlin to pay reparations.

He was in Rome for the coronation of Pope Pius XI, and narrowly escaped death when, riding in Borghese Park, he spurred his mount ahead to catch the runaway horse of a celebrated American movie star, also taking her morning canter.

Finds Luck Piece
Native Chief 6000 Feet Up Gives Talisman

Floyd covered the Red and Socialist uprisings in Vienna, and the Carlist coup to restore the Hapsburg dynasty in Budapest, when the ex-Emperor flew to Hungary. He visited Rumania several times when the dying King Ferdinand's realm was beset by danger. Later he was present in Spain in the earlier unsuccessful attempts of the Republicans to force Alfonso to abdicate.

Then he undertook an African expedition, leading his own caravan straight across the Sahara Desert, from Algiers to Colomb-Bechar, thence to Timbuctoo, on the oxbow of the Niger. We traversed the dread waste zone, going from post to post of the French garrisons which dot the "bled."

He followed the caravan route by trailing the bleached bones of men and camels who had preceded him and who had been engulfed by thirst and hunger in the wilderness.

His way took him across the Tanezrouft, "The Country of Thirst," and over the Hoggar range. He lost 40 pounds and grew a long red beard on that trip, but he obtained his lucky piece which he always has carried since.

An aged native chief, a witch doctor in Tammanrasset, in the heart of the Sahara, 6000 feet up in the Hoggar mountains, presented him with the curious object, about the size of an egg, apparently a petrified nut.

From Timbuctoo he went down the Niger to the Atlantic and thence proceeded to Cape Town at the southern extremity of the dark continent. He struck off to Australia and Singapore from there, and then continued on to China.

At Shanghai news of the Riff war against the French and Spanish reached him. He was ordered to North Africa.

Two weeks later Gibbons was in Fez, Morocco, when Gen. De Chambrun was preparing the French offensive in liaison with Gen. Primo De Rivera, the Madrid dictator, personally in command of the Spanish troops.

Gibbons accompanied the converging Franco-Spanish advance against the warlike Moors, saw their snipers pick off officers and shoot down low-flying airplanes. He was there when Abd-El-Krim finally surrendered rather than sacrifice the last of his indomitable tribesmen.

Gibbons lived in Germany for months, getting first hand information of Baron Richthofen, the "Red Knight of Germany," then passed a long period in England, checking up on the victims of the supreme ace of the war.

Then he came back to America. But not for long. Within a few months he was on an airplane expedition, flying over the Caribbean, visiting all the ports and all the islands, studying from the sky the living map of the next potential theater of a naval war for the United States. He used this information in his book, "The Red Napoleon."

Tomorrow the Boston Evening American will carry a concluding article on the life and activities of Floyd Gibbons.

POLICE CHECKUP BLAGDEN TALE

Lake Placid, N. Y., Feb. 16 (AP)—In a statement today, State police said they intended to check "very carefully" Harry H. Blagden's story that he was kidnaped last Thursday night.

They said a trooper had flown to Cleveland, where Blagden turned up late Monday night, to return here with the wealthy sportsman.

Blagden disappeared from E. Roland Harriman's cottage at the fashionable Lake Placid Club. Relatives then reported they had received a letter in his handwriting saying he had been kidnaped and that his abductors demanded $1000 ransom.

A brother went to Tupper Lake to keep a rendezvous and pay the $1000, but no kidnaper appeared. Nothing was heard from Blagden until he turned up at the home of a friend in Cleveland. He said he had been taken to Cleveland by his captors and that he had escaped there.

Snoops on the Men Folks!

Restaurateur Harry Hunt keeps his huge collection of match-folders, collected from all over the globe, in the book-cases in the library of his Brookline home—of all places to keep them! . . . Don't think that it's plain acquisitiveness when you see the sociable Harry reaching for extra match-folders . . . He's just riding his hobby . . .

A Hub crony of Tammany Bigshot John F. Curry tells us he leaves banquets early so that he'll be able to get up by the dawn's early light . . . And people who are late in keeping appointments with Mr. Curry—even one minute—get a first-rate, big-time bawling out from John . . . And furthermore, when a person's been late in meeting him, he keeps reminding that person of his delinquency forever and ever—each time he meets him . . .

More Snoopery

In Jack Richmond's home there's a phonograph record called 'Want to Be Around My Baby All the Time,' and the vocalizing on the disk is by Jack . . . For that reason, the record is pretty well worn out, because when Jack's as sy his Mrs. spends hours playing the thing over and over, to hear her absent sugar-loaf's accents . . . Charlie Morrissey, swallow-tailed man-about-town, is a "gym" hound . . . That's why he pours so nicely into his sma:tly-cut evening gear . . . Dave Bloom, who compo.ed "Soliloquy," "Song of the Bayou," etc., does tricky things when playing any pop:lar number on the piano, by counterpointing it all around the melody . . . But still his Roscoe-Ates-like pan is even more fascinating . . . And how he played after hours at a club the other evening, for exactly an hour—after announcing that it was out of the question for him to play, as he was Too Tired . . .

That Infernal Coat!

Just before starting on their European vacation, Sevitzky's wife persuaded him to buy a raccoon coat . . . For some reason he was averse to doing so . . . Maybe he's psychic and has premonitions . . . At all events, when the Sevitzkys got to Paris and Sevitzky set out for the first day's round-the-town-ing, arrayed in his raccoon benny, his woes began . . . In Europe, it appears, men don't wear fur-coats . . . Fur-lined coats . . . yes . . . But coats with the fur outside—never! . . . So Sevitzky's progress through the streets of Paris was a sensation —a joyous one for the townsmen, a bitter one for him . . . Gendarmes chucklingly asked him, "Vous avez chaud, monsieur, hein?" and things like that . . . Things like that meaning, I'm told, "Aren't you pretty warm, sir?" . . . Urchins whistled after him . . . Some of the gamins followed him . . . In Vienna it was worse . . . The kids not only followed him as if he were the Pied Piper, but played ring-around-a-Rosy around him, yelling about the coat . . . And one woman said, quite audibly, "Isn't that terrible? I'd never go out with a man wearing a coat like that!" . . . So by the time the Sevitzkys got to Germany, Sevitzky wouldn't wear the coat at all . . . And in Germany the weather was coldest of all! . . . But he preferred freezing to the cries of children, the shouts of cops, the disparaging remarks of pretty ladies . . . Back in the U. S. Sevitzky is getting positively the first particle of enjoyment he has ever obtained from his raccoon coat!

From Far Corners

Colleen Moore's one ambition is to lie around on the Raney Plaza's beach at Miami, and the Hamborough tan . . . Joe Kaden-on-the-Keys is perhaps the world's greatest postcard sender . . . And this despite the fact that Billy Shapiro, we're told, on one morning sat himself down and sent several hundred postcards to N. Y. Press Agent Marc Lachman — some to Marc's hotel, some to his office . . . They say Marc couldn't get into his office till the postal cards were taken out, there were that many! . . . Heywood Broun's one thing as his Boston friends getting a postcard from Billy while he was Miami-ing was unheard of . . . Walter Masucco postcards from Havana, "The Scythia is my boat" . . . Lots of people get Cuba Libe that in rumbatown—the bacardi is that stimulating! . . .

Concluding Chatter

Now just why is it that when Stick-Pleurisy-Pneumonic enters a dance-place the band bursts into "Two Loves Have I" . . . Roy Olsen, who started up the Chalet's gay walls, is an architect as well as a painter and some of the building-silhouettes in the Chalet (and mingled with pictures of slim-waisted ladies) are of some of the N. Y. skyscrapers he has designed . . . All the trumpeters now trying to blow as high-and-mighty as Louis Armstrong—and one local puffer even claims that the phrase, "We'll now swing another number," was his original idea . . . But still they can't wheeze out the above-high-C's like Louis . . .

"THREE'S A CROWD" SPLENDID TONIC FOR PLAYGOERS

Fun Aplenty on Colonial Stage

The Players

The Creators

Sketches by Cosy Ford, Newman Levy, Groucho Marx and Fred Allen.
Music and lyrics by Howard Dietz and Arthur Schwartz.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

Under almost any title, Max Gordon's trinity of stars in "Three's A Crowd" would give honest assurance of spirited entertainment. At the Colonial you meet them face to face in what is now termed intimate revue—stuff and nonsense done in the new manner, with musical adornment arranged to suit the occasion—and a spattering of art in the form of dancing on the toes, and what not. The trinity, of course, named in the order of appearance is Clifton Webb, Fred Allen and Libby Holman.

* * *

What Mr. Gordon had in mind, naturally, was an intimate revue. What he has created for the play goer, if one may digress for a moment, is so much intimacy that the lay mind wavers between the sense of justice to first class lively entertainment and its bewilderment at this new order of things in musical revue. Mr. Gordon, we know, has not squandered his earthly substance on this production, but he has been more than prodigal in his investments in personnel. That is why, perhaps, the Messrs Webb and Allen and Miss Holman keep the center of the stage so much to themselves. Mr. Allen, a likely local boy of other days—the "Golden Days"—appears almost as master of ceremonies. No better choice could have been made, for through this medium came the evening's most delicious fun.

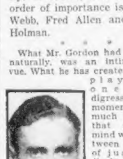
But also there came art and melody, to say nothing of the dance, in "Three's A Crowd." Its ruling elements were clearly defined. You enjoyed the drolleries of Mr. Allen and met him more than half way by chuckling at the right moment; you found Mr. Webb a nonchalant gentleman of many masculine graces, and being gallant to the last degree, accepted Libby Holman as the true exponent of life gone wrong as the sobbing song-writers prescribe it. On the whole "Three's A Crowd" proved itself very good medicine for the aching, hopeful playgoer. There was something in it for everybody: it seemed fully alive to the demands of the hour. You could laugh with Fred Allen, grow sober with Libby Holman and even rouse yourself to the artistry of Clifton Webb. There was tonic of some sort at every turn.

Max Gordon has stressed his favorite players—Webb Allen and Holman. But no revue ever survived such limited man power.



Harry H. Goldstein

Splendid leaders, of course, but totally unavailing without the support of top sergeants and privates in the ranks. Which is why we remember Tamara Geva, graceful and talented in the dance, and also Wally Coyle, whose feet, it seemed, had malicious mischief underfoot. And there was a girl listed as Helen Hall, whose look was simple, if you measure it in the show's daily routine, but who, with infinite gaiety, made the night's work easier for her more featured companions.

"Three's A Crowd" is revue so intimate as nearly to step over the footlights. It is crowded with good humor and it is gay and snappy as a co-ed freshman, which may be taken as a fair summary of what is going on at the Colonial.

New Franklin Park Policy

The Franklin Park Theater in Dorchester opens next Friday under the ownership of the Acme Amusement Company, with a policy that was so popular at the theater three years ago, namely, vaudeville and pictures, under the management of Harry H. Goldstein, a veteran of 17 years of showmanship. Mr. Goldstein is the recipient of many congratulatory messages from the thousands of friends and acquaintances he has made in Dorchester, where for years he was district manager for the Netoco chain of theaters. He announces his opening bill for Friday, to run for six days, to feature the popular comedian, Eddie Cantor, in "Palmy Days" and the co-feature, "Pleasure," with Carmel Myers and Conway Tearle. Both these features are first in the territory.

Mr. Goldstein also announces that he has purchased the entire output of United Artists pictures for this season, first run in that section. At the conclusion of the first week's program, the theater will then settle into a policy of a double feature bill for Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, and for the latter part of the week they will feature a five-act bill of high class vaudeville, a feature picture, and an augmented orchestra under the direction of Sam Robbins.

Maybe I'm Wrong (About Hollywood)

—By JOHN P. MEDBURY—

Hollywood, Feb 17—Automobile tourists are already beginning to arrive for this summer's Olympic games and Southern California is planning to pave the highways with mirrors so that women motorists can keep their eyes on the road.

The Dizzy Heights

Some kind of a medal ought to go to the economical actor who took up mental telepathy so that he wouldn't have to spend any money for telegrams.

They're telling about the ritzy dressmaker in Beverly Hills who cuts all of her friends on the bias.

I Surrender, Dear

A Hollywood husband gave himself up to the police the other day and admitted that he was a bigamist. He said his wife was too many women for one man.

Through Kleig Eyes

A little extra-girl eats nine dollars' worth of food at lunch. She isn't really hungry—she's just rehearsing for dinner.

In some homes things are so bad that husbands are going through their own pockets.

A popular cafe here is going ultra. . . Instead of bread, they now serve the sandwiches between book-ends.

One of the large studios has worked out a plan to reduce production costs. They're shooting all their pictures on the desert so that they can film the mirage for backgrounds and do away with the expense of building sets.

The champion optimist is the fellow who tried to get a mortgage on his wife's cottage pudding.

Constance Bennett Urges Girls to Be Little Old-Fashioned

By HARRIS MORGAN

Constance Bennett, whose new picture, "Lady With a Past," comes to the RKO screen tomorrow, thinks the best way for a woman to attain charm is for her to be old-fashioned. She suggests that lassies of this jazz era study the manners of their grandmothers to secure those elements that give them greater appeal.

Miss Bennett's thoughts on feminine charms came out during a discussion of attractiveness in womankind. She has this to say on the subject:

"Once I read a story about a famous American siren now living in Europe, in which the writer declared that, despite her several husbands and legion of admirers, she was really the most old-fashioned girl he had ever met.

"She was a marvelous listener, unlike many pert young things who want to hog the limelight with their own conversational prowess.

"I think this writer just about hit at the kernel of womanly charm in general. The roughest man appreciates refinement in a woman.

"In fact, it might not be a bad idea for the girl who wants to cultivate charm to steal at least one or two pages from the book of some grand-mamma who was the secret passion of all the gallants of her day. The basic essentials of feminine fascination haven't changed since Eve selected her very prettiest fig-leaf, plaited her long hair with flowers and thus bedecked in loveliness, set out to beguile Adam's exile from the Garden of Eden with soft-voiced coquetry."

John Gilbert Will Star in 'Downstairs,' Which He Wrote Himself

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service, Inc.
Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Feb. 17—Is Jack Gilbert happy these days? He is positively treading on air, and it isn't because he is in love or because he has just inherited a fortune. It's because Irving Thalberg has just made arrangements to produce "Downstairs," written by Jack, and, of course, starring him as the chauffeur-hero.

Louella O. Parsons

Four years ago, when Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was hunting for a story for Mr. Gilbert, he wrote "Downstairs." It was put away and forgotten until a few days ago. Suddenly Mr. Thalberg remembered the story and decided to put it on the screen, with Monta Bell, directing. Lenore Coffee is writing the adaptation.

Jack was a staff writer in the old days when he worked for Maurice Tourneur before he became an actor.

New Jack Lait Story

Sounds to me as if Charles R. Rogers has gone on a buying spree in New York. Not a day passes but we hear of some new plan for a Rogers independent special. He has just purchased "A Girl Without a Room," by Jack Lait. You say you haven't read it. Of course you haven't, because it hasn't been published yet. It's to run serially and to be published in book form, but Charlie isn't waiting for publication. He bought it from the manuscript. He is a little superstitious about buying plays and books before they reach publication. "Millie," his best box office number up to now, was bought from the galley proofs.

Hollywood Chatter

Betty Compson and Hugh Trevor, after three months apart, have kissed and made up. Betty stopped her on her way to San Francisco, when the reconciliation took place. Friends are wagering these two will marry soon. Lily Damita's friends are trying to figure if she was spoofing them when she said she and Sidney Smith have been married five months. It was five months ago that the rumor was current that Lily and Mr. Smith had eloped. Tom Mix's bride has a whole set of trapeze and rings in the back yard of the Mix home. That's the first indication that anyone had of his romance. Even then the film colony was amazed when it read an exclusive Universal Service story that Tom expected to take the big step. John Considine, Jr.'s, gift to his bride was a mink coat. Lupe Velez, accompanied by Randolph Scott, gave the Saturday nighters at the Embassy Club something to talk about. Mr. Scott looks like Gary Cooper and Lupe has been "smiling" at him for some time.

"Huddle" Puzzles Ramon

Ramon Novarro is spending all his time trying to learn the technique of football. He is reading books on the sport and interviewing friends. "Huddle" is not only a new departure for Ramon but it is giving Kane Richmond a chance. You remember Kane Richmond? He bears a strong resemblance to Ramon and was formerly leading man for Universal. He has been signed for the second lead in "Huddle." Out at First National they are very much excited over "Two Seconds." The story is of a man who, on his way to the electric chair, reviews his whole life in two seconds. John Wray and J. Carrol Naish have been added to the cast which features Edward Robinson and Vivienne Osborne.

King Still on Job

Henry King is one of the Fox directors definitely mentioned as having received the fatal letter. The letter that repudiates contracts previously made. Yet, today, I heard that Henry had been called in to direct Elissa Landi in "The Woman in Room 13." If this is true, then the King contract must once more be in force. Neither Henry nor Raoul Walsh need lose any sleep over the Fox situation. Each is a good director with plenty of good pictures to his credit, and good directors are scarce. Neil Hamilton and Ralph Bellamy, both excellent actors, have been cast opposite Miss Landi.

Snapshots of Hollywood

GENE DENNIS, famous psychic, had just finished speaking of a Boston influence in VIRGINIA VALLI'S life when in walked CHARLIE FARRELL, who was supposed to be in Palm Springs. CHARLIE was born in Boston. MISS DENNIS kept a drawing room full of guests at Pickfair well entertained. She told DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS his reaction to various tests that had been made for his picture and she said MARY PICKFORD would make a picture in three months—her biggest and best in a long time. MARION DAVIES wore one of the new style evening dresses — white lace with fur-trimmed cape. MRS. RAOUL WALSH, also in white, wore a short, mohair coat. MISS DAVIES' dress was not unlike the one in style she wore as maid of honor at the PANTAGES - CONSIDINE wedding. The new MRS. CONSIDINE, dressed in a blue going-away gown, stopped at MARION DAVIES' Sunday night to say au revoir to some of her close friends. JOHN CONSIDINE, SR., and ALEXANDER PANTAGES, bitter business rivals 25 years ago, chatted affably at the wedding and forgot old-time animosities. That's all today. See you tomorrow.

Roland Hayes Is Heard in Symphony Hall Concert

By MOSES SMITH

Although Roland Hayes had sung in Boston twice this season as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, his concert last night was his only complete program of the year. Assembled in the customary manner of Hayes, it included three classic songs, four lieder by Schubert, songs by recent or contemporary composers in French, Russian and English, and the usual assortment of Negro Spirituals at the end.

Mr. Hayes seemed less in the vein last night than in the past half of the program had elapsed before he had begun to assert his spell over the listener by the sincerity and conviction, by the extraordinary concentration of his art. Whatever one might think of the technical virtues or limitations of his singing (and who are we to say?), there has been universal agreement on the more "spiritual" side of his performances. It was therefore surprising and disappointing to miss, at least partially this vitalizing quality in the four Schubert songs.

Despite the stress and strain on his voice in the opening number of the second half of the program, a song by Gliere, the performance was exceptionally moving, and from then on one heard the familiar Hayes, in his field unsurpassed. Two of the three Russian songs he sang in the original language.

'Lady With a Past' on Keith's Screen Thursday

The Constance Bennett picture, "Lady With a Past," starts its engagement at RKO Keith's this week on Thursday, a day ahead of the regular opening day of that house. The film, a smart, sophisticated comedy drama of Paris and New York, in which the star is seen in the role of a ultra modern society miss instead of her usual working girl interest, will have an eight-day run instead of the usual seven.

It will live in Your Memory forever!

DEMOCRAT WINS MAYOR'S CHAIR IN CLEVELAND

Cleveland, Feb. 17 (AP)—After 17 years of a Republican regime, Cleveland today [illegible] a Democratic flag over the door of its highest and most powerful office.

Although Republicans won a majority of its council seats in November, Cleveland yesterday elected a Democrat for mayor.

The new Mayor is Ray T. Miller, Notre Dame football player. Miller was opposed by former City Manager Daniel E. Morgan, choice of the Republicans.

Miller, the present Cuyahoga County prosecutor, a 39-year-old ex-doughboy, received 102,632 votes to Morgan's 94,529.

It was one of the greatest outpourings of voters in the city's history, and was considered a serious defeat for the local political machine of Maurice Maschke, Republican national committeeman, as in Cleveland the mayor has powers unusually wide.

The election was accompanied by one shooting, numerous fights and countless minor conflicts.

Miller will be Cleveland's first mayor in eight years. During that period this was the largest city ever to use the manager plan of government.

TUMULTY HITS 'YES, NO' MEN

Newark, N. J., Feb. 17 (AP)—Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to President Wilson, today assailed political expediency and declared "the popular mode of the past few years has been an appeal to the prejudices instead of an appeal to the handsome passions of men."

Speaking before the Democratic Women's Luncheon Club, Tumulty said:

"Always with some candidates "in these days when great decisions have to be made affecting the peace and prosperity of the world, the main questions seem to be, 'how easily can I win an election?' How can I shake hands with the bitterenders, the implacable foes of Woodrow Wilson, the League and world co-operation and at the same time stand in reverence before the shrine of Wilson?"

Tumulty charged that in the "diagnoses of those who have recently come forward in behalf of their own candidacy, to express their views, there has been nothing but halting fears—indecision, and worse than all, surrender to the devil of expediency.

MAYOR TO VISIT ROOSEVELT

Mayor Curley made his first airplane flight when he crossed from Havana to Miami, Fla., in the giant Pan-American Airways plane, Clipper.

At Palm Beach, the mayor said he enjoyed the air trip and planned to start home within a few days.

"I will stop off at New York and have a talk with Gov. Roosevelt and will be guided solely by him, for after all he is the candidate," he said regarding the political situation.

He refused to comment on the announcement of ex-Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell that he would run for mayor.

DIGEST'S POLL HEAVILY 'WET'

New York, Feb. 17 (INS)—First figures of the Literary Digest's prohibition poll today had indicated overwhelming sentiment for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment in four widely scattered cities.

Los Angeles showed the highest percentage in favor of repeal with the preliminary wet vote totaling 4071 as against 323 for the dry.

In all four cities the vote was at least two to one in favor of repeal, even Charlotte, N. C., the driest city polled, voting 778 to 321, Lima, O., voted for repeal 320 to 345 and Atlanta 1380 to 338.

Whiting Candidate for G. O. P. Delegate

Holyoke, Feb. 17—William F. Whiting of this city, a personal friend of former President Coolidge, has announced his candidacy for delegate to the Republican national convention, from the 1st district.

It is understood Whiting, who served as Secretary of Commerce during the last year of the Coolidge administration, will go to the convention unpledged.

Three young ladies put their heads together...

THEY WERE TALKING ABOUT SMOKING... whether girls should or should not smoke; but it came out that all three of them had been smoking for a long time.

They were asking each other what made a good cigarette. And after discussing one thing and another, they agreed that a cigarette should be milder.

They thought also that it should taste just right—that is, not over-sweet, but on the other hand, not bitter—just sweet enough.

And everybody, they said, wants anything that is placed in the mouth just as pure as can be.

Then they began to think what cigarette, if any, filled this bill; and agreed that CHESTERFIELD was milder—tasted better—and was pure. The girls were satisfied, because "They Satisfy."

THIS IS LIFE

DEAD RETURNING TO LIFE ON STAGE FASCINATING TO PLAYGOER

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

THERE IS A KIND of fascination in seeing the great dead upon the stage, which must account for the number of plays which have been built around more or less famous personalities.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

The immediate example, of course, is that piece now playing in Boston in which the invalid poetess Elizabeth Barrett, authoress of "Aurora Leigh," and young Robert Browning, at that time less famous than she, are shown in their difficult courtship in the house in Wimpole street. Mr. Philip Hale asks very pertinently whether the success of the piece is not due more to its historical and literary interest than to its intrinsic merit, and one is inclined to agree with him.

There have been all kinds of plays, ridiculous and otherwise, in which historical characters have appeared. Over a century ago there was a play called "Andre," with a cast of characters made up of most of the general officers of the Continental and British armies, all of them, including Washington, speaking in orotund blank verse! Washington, by the way, has always been a successful character on the stage. He requires little acting, merely a dignified carriage, a decent gravity, and a blue and buff uniform.

Arliss the Perfect Disraeli

Lincoln, too, has been very successfully impersonated many times both on stage and screen. A Benjamin Chapin, I believe, was the first to exploit him in a kind of lecture monologue, showing him in White House days, with tall hat, shawl and whiskers complete. The actor who played in Drinkwater's piece also gave the illusion. The youthful and beardless Lincoln is much harder, but in Griffith's picture the effect was at times most satisfactory.

Those historical personages with strongly marked lineaments can hardly fail behind the footlights; Arliss' Disraeli, for instance, in which the actor and the part so perfectly coincided. But when the same actor undertook to play the little lion, the fiery aggressive, quick-tempered Alxandr Hamilton, neither Arliss' profile or manner gave us the slightest illusion. Indeed, Arliss' Hamilton reminded one of that grievous failure when Sir Henry Irving, he of the beetling brows and eagle profile, attempted to play the neat, trim and sub-nosed Robespierre. Yet in Dante, Irving seemed the poet of the Inferno resurrected again. Again, Arliss did well, though the play failed, as the mad fiddler Paganini.

I have never seen a good Napoleon on the stage. Arnold Daly tried him once in Shaw's "The Man of Destiny," after Mansfield had given up the part in despair. But the Napoleon of the Italian campaign was lean and aquiline, entirely concave, as effete which Daly with his blunt nose and thick muscular jaws like Mussolini's, could never compass. As to the nature of Napoleon, most actors are too tall, too stately, nowhere nervous enough.

No actor can possibly fail with Cardinal Richelieu. The make-up fits almost any face save the blatantly pudgy, and the familiar red robe does the rest. Queen Elizabeth—if only the actress is willing to let herself appear old and ugly and yet a queen—is a sure fire part. Both Haidee Wright and more recently Lynn Fontanne have played her superbly.

Shaw Fond of Historical Characters

I am inclined to believe, however, that the single historical character which was presented on the stage with the maximum of illusion was Julius Caesar, as played by Sir Johnstone Forbes-Robertson in Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra." In spite of the fact that the aging actor wore a long sleeved undershirt to protect himself on a draughty stage.

Shaw, by the way, is fond fo historical characters. Besides his Napoleon and Caesar there is the robust and humorous Great Catherine of Russia, played richly by Gertrude Kingston, as well as the delightful sketch of General Burgoyne, Gentlemanly Johnny, in "The Devil's Disciple." In "Back to Methuselch" he dared to put both Premier Asquith and Lloyd George on the stage in the same scene, thinly disguised under the names of Joyce Burge and Lubin. And in an earlier skit of the Votes for Women period he burlesqued two politicians at once under the name of Balsquith, as well as General Mitchener (Kitchener) himself.

At least once has General Ulysses Grant been put on the stage. This was in the old folk-drama "The Drummer Boy of Shiloh," which, some 30 or 40 years ago, used to be played in these parts by the G. A. R. posts aided by the Woman's Relief Corps. I remember well my first impression of General Grant as played by a local militia officer for the Worcester G. A. R., with slouch hat, whiskers and cigar all complete, fighting it out on front line of it took all summer!

Somebody will put Theodore Roosevelt into a play one of these days. The part will be easy to make-up and play, but the piece will have to be a comedy to get the full effect out of it. Romain Rolland, of course, has put the heroes of the French Revolution int oa series of unwieldly machines, and Emil Ludwig prefaced his biography of Bismarck with a play about him and young William II, entitled "The Dismissal," which, he said, played over 1000 times on 200 German stages.

Shakespeare an Easy Character

I have been racking my brains to think of any other plays about literary pepole, like the Brownings. I do not believe there can be many. I seem faintly to remember one about Edgar Allen Poe and another about Byron. But literary folks are sedentary. They don't do much, and unless their lives contain amorous adventures or elopements or crimes of passion, they art not very interesting. There is, however, come to think of it, a play about Oscar Wilde, which so far as I know has not been played in this country.

Except, of course William Shakespere! There is "The Dark Lady of the Sonnets" and Clemence Dane's "Will Shakespere." He is another figure not too difficult. A bald pate, a Van Dyke beard, doublet and trunk hose, a few lines from Hamlet's soliluqy—and there he is for you.

It is a wonder we do not have more plays of the sort. They provide the kind of fat, picturesque parts that actors love, with plenty of costumes—and certainly the personages, whether historical or literary, are quite as interesting in themselves as the crowd of quite dreadful people that go to make up the dramatis personae of our realistic contemporary theater.

FOUR COLLEGES TO COMPETE IN ESSAY TEST

Prizes for the Best Papers on Ways to Solve Religious and Racial Issues

The Calvert Round Table of Boston today announced a prize essay contest among students of Boston College, Boston University, Harvard and Wellesley, to promote a better understanding among the various religious and racial groups.

The first prize is $100, second $50 and third $25. Each essay must contain not less than 2000 words and not more than 2500 and must be in the hands of the committee in charge not later than April 15.

The committee will include Rev. Francis E. Low, S. J. of Boston College; Prof. John J. Mahoney and Prof. Samuel M. Waxman of Boston University; Prof. Crane Brinton of Harvard and Prof. Alfred D. Sheffield and Prof. Olive Dugcher, both of Wellesley.

The essays are to be on the subject:

"What can be done to promote better understanding between different religious and racial groups?"

"Feeling that national unity may be seriously threatened by religious and racial misunderstanding, and desiring to promote mutual good will, appreciation of each other's sincere spiritual convictions, and the elimination of unworthy religious and racial prejudices, the Calvert Round Table offers these prizes," states the announcement.

CALLS POLICE AS HEAT FAILS

A complaint of the "atmospheric conditions" at an apartment house on North Common st., Lynn, prompted Lynn police for a while until Capt. John T. Curry saw a light.

"Aw, that means there ain't enough heat," he said. "Go tell that landlord to shovel on more coal."

Which was done and the landlord promised with the result that Alice S. Bernier, who made the complaint, will find it warmer in her suite.

Now the mystery is—Who wrote that $5 phrase "atmospheric conditions," on the police blotter?

FRAUD CHARGED IN WILL FIGHT

Renewed efforts by contestants of the will of Charles Hitchcock Tyler, wealthy Boston lawyer, who died Dec. 6, to show he did not sign the document are expected to be made when the case resumes in Salem probate court today.

In his will Tyler left $1,000,000 to the Boston City Hospital for a surgical research laboratory, $50,000 to Karl Singer, of Beverly, executor, two $50,000 bequests to employes and the residue to the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. All his relatives and servants, with the exception of two mentioned and members of his law firm, were cut off in the disposal of the estate, valued at $1,700,000.

The chief contestant of the will is Frederick C. Hitchcock, New York engineer and tunnel builder, cousin of the dead man, who is also representing his sister, Mrs. Abbie Hitchcock Bartlett, of Paris, France.

At the opening of the case counsel alleged the will was executed when the late attorney was of unsound mind, that it is fraudulent in part and was procured under undue influence on the part of Singer and Dr. George G. Sears, former Harvard medical school professor.

O'CONNELL SAYS HE WILL BE NEXT MAYOR

Ex-Congressman Springs Surprise on Nichols; Says Voters Are Tired of "Dynasties"

Announcement of his candidacy for mayor of Boston was made by former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell at the annual dinner of the Massachusetts Ave. Association at Hotel Kenmore.

In the presence of former Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols, who had been introduced as the next mayor of Boston, O'Connell declared that the city was tired of "dynasties" and that he and not Nichols would be the next mayor. He then charged that the central portion of the city was being neglected in improvements.

DINNER FOR MOSKOW

Nichols was scheduled as a speaker at the dinner, which was given in honor of Jay I. Moskow, retiring president of the organization. O'Connell was not listed as a speaker but was singled out from the floor to address the gathering.

Nichols suggested several improvements for the Back Bay district and then announced his opposition to wage and salary reductions. He asserted high wages and salary increases stimulated workers to their best efforts.

Called to speak a few minutes later, O'Connell unexpectedly announced his own candidacy.

"Boston is tired of dynasties," he said. "It had John F. Fitzgerald long enough. It has had Curley long enough, and I am sure the voters of Boston are not going to return Mr. Nichols to office. He has been referred to as the next possible mayor, and it is no secret to you that he is going to run. Although he and I are warm personal friends, I think that this time I, and not he, am going to be elected mayor of Boston."

PLEADS FOR ECONOMY

He then offered a mild rap at the Back Bay improvement program offered by Nichols and called for the development of downtown Boston instead of spending money on rapid transit extensions and widening of streets in the outlying areas.

"The subway and rapid transit facilities," he said, "are being extended for the benefit and development of outlying communities, while central Boston is being neglected. Property values have gone down year after year, until we have reached the point where Boston is a good place to run in and out of, with people carrying their business to outside centers."

He pleaded for reduction of taxes and expenses of government.

PERSONALITIES OF AIR

When a radio play is networked to 40 stations there is an estimated audience of three million list'rs, which is an audience equivalent to the attendance of a 9-yr. theater run.

Heh, heh. Some of those radio plays couldn't go on two nights yet they do the equivalent of nine yrs. in one.

"TIP" O'NEIL, Eve. American Police reporter, has persuaded Police Commr. Hultman to face the mike, and on WNAC at 6.45 tonight Tip will interview him on current police department problems. It isn't often Commr. Hultman speaks on the air and when he does it's worth a listen. As for Tip, he can be counted on to extricate a half hr's interview in 15 minutes . . . The nightly Howard Barlow (WAAB) concerts will be extended from 15 minutes to a half hr. starting Mon. . . . The Sun Arthur Feidler concert on WEEI will shift to Thurs. afternoons beginning Feb. 25 . . . The Clearcoal preview of the eve. p'gram to come is WEEI-ed at 3 tomorrow . . . Rudy Vallee's vacation will be in Cal. with friend wife.

WTIC, Hartford, offers radio dramas at night and then by popular demand repeats them the next afternoon.

"That's nothing. Commercial talks are repeated night after night, but hardly by popular demand. Three cheers for the free-wheeling dial!

GERMANY leads in the number of rebroadcasts to the U. S. Gt. Britain has dropped to 2nd . . . Ziegfeld is invading radio for sure. He's picked up Revva Reyes, NBC singer . . . They're calling Lucille (Caravan) Wall "Radio's Bernhardt" but it's still Lucille Wall around these parts . . . When March of Time passes into oblivion Mar. 4 a similar series under a different sponsorship will commence . . . Jack Beauvais and his piano-organ accompanists, Hanify and Rumrill, are being auditioned tomorrow for a sponsored series . . . Ted Husing has finally learned it's his duty to an'nce sports and not participate in them. While covering the Winter Olympic game Ted thought he'd do a little skiing on the side. Result, his shoulder has been spread like jam and he is encased in tape.

NBC's mountain gal, Frances Bowden, took her troubles to the radio audience and got more troubles as a result.

She told her list'rs her cat, Josephine, died. And then came the deluge. Cat gifts are flocking so fast she'll have to build a home for the felines.

Here's a tip: lady artists, get before the mike and tell the folks how you lost your diamond lavalliers. And boys, cry to the list'rs about the loss of your watch fobs.

OFFICER CRAWLS OUT ON LADDER, SAVES BOY IN CHARLES

CROWD CHEERS DARING RESCUE FROM ICE

Cambridge Youth, Numbed by Freezing Water, Dragged Out in Nick of Time

While skaters, pedestrians and motorists looked on and then cheered, Patrolman Thomas B. Dawley of the Metropolitan district police rescued Joseph Taurson, 19, of 191 Mt Auburn st., Cambridge, from drowning in Charles river today.

Taurson was crossing the ice opposite the Cambridge boathouse on the west side of Larz Anderson bridge, from Cambridge to Brighton, when, at mid stream, the ice gave way and he plunged into the freezing water.

The Metropolitan patrolman touring the speedway in a police car, stopped his auto leaped for a ladder on the bank and made his way out over the ice until it began to bend beneath him. Then he laid the ladder down crawled out to Taurson and hauled him up on the ladder.

The rescued youth was taken to the Speedway station of the Metropolitan police and wrapped in blankets beside a heater.

"I was in the water four or five minutes and I was getting numb all over," said Taurson. "My hands were so cold I couldn't hold to the ice any longer.

"The officer came just in time. I was just about to go under. Gee, but he was right on the job!"

ANSWERS POUR IN

Thousands of entries began to pour in, some of them as early as Saturday night following publication of number six in the series. By Wednesday noon the contest headquarters looked like a section of the Boston postoffice.

Entries postmarked later than midnight of Feb. 9 were automatically eliminated. Then a force of checkers were set at work and every single entry was carefully checked for errors.

So huge was the number of entries that this preliminary work was not completed until yesterday morning. Then the judges sorted out all entries having correct answers and judged them for neatness.

DAILY RALLIES FOR ROOSEVELT

State headquarters for the Roosevelt-for-President movement will be opened next Friday afternoon in the Park Square Building, with James Roosevelt, son of the candidate, in charge.

The organization work will be directed by Charles H. McGlue and Michael A. O'Leary, two former chairmen of the Democratic state committee. It is planned to open a speaking forum somewhere downtown where daily rallies will be held.

Mayor John J. Murphy of Somerville, one of the leaders of the Roosevelt [illegible], stated that the radio speaker for next Sunday will be Mayor John H. Burke of Medford.

Fight Urged on County Expenses

In a communication to the Newton city government, the city of Melrose urges support of proposed legislation to require a county to obtain the consent of at least three-fourths of the cities and towns before undertaking a building project involving more than $250,000.

The measure is an outgrowth of unrest caused by the large assessments levied for the new county sanitorium at Waltham. Newton was assessed $303,000 as its share.

JUDGE LENIENT TO YOUTH

As Joseph F. McLaughlin, 16, of River st., Mattapan, was walking out of the courtroom to begin a six-year sentence at the Concord Reformatory, Chief Justice Walter Perley Hall turned and said to him:

"You could have got more, McLaughlin, do you understand that?"

McLaughlin nodded as though he appreciated he had received a "break."

Although the man had been arrested repeatedly since he was a boy and had a record covering a long sheet of paper, yesterday's sentence was the first long sentence imposed.

According to the record he was first arrested as a delinquent, [illegible] offences increased in gravity with his age. He was arrested before [illegible] robbery but was found not guilty, and this fact weighed in his favor with the chief justice.

McLaughlin held up Arthur O'Keefe and James O'Keefe, a boy, in a store in Roxbury. In company with another man he entered the store and with waving guns forced the two store clerks into a rear room. The defendant, according to the evidence, told the elder O'Keefe to stop peeking at him and to turn around if he did not want his head blown off. They got $135.

GRACE FACES WIFE IN COURT

Thomas Grace, son of Captain Harry Grace of the Boston police department, informed Quincy police that he will be in Quincy court today to answer charges of threatening to assault his wife, Mrs. Helen Grace of Billings st., Quincy.

Mrs. Grace obtained a warrant for his arrest after he is alleged to have stolen their year-old child from its crib and kept it in hiding a month.

The child was returned after Mrs. Grace [illegible] with Captain Grace. After she failed to obtain a warrant against Grace on a charge of breaking and entering, Mrs. Grace announced she would take steps to obtain a divorce.

Aldermen Oppose Proposed Pay Cut

An unofficial poll of the Newton board of aldermen indicates that the proposed 10 per cent reduction in salaries of city employes will fail of passage if presented to the board for action.

Of 14 members approached, 13 are said to oppose such a cut while six were reported as favoring it.

Divorcee Calls Off Her Wedding Plans

When Mrs. Harriet Maud Rice, 42, a divorcee of 154 Magazine st., Cambridge, learned that her intention to marry Walter J. Coyle, 21, of 3 Dana st., would become public knowledge, she declared she would cancel her wedding plans.

YOUR FORD IS SERVICED PROPERLY

when you take it to an Authorized Ford Dealer

YOUR Ford was built for many thousands of miles of dependable, fault-free service. But no matter how good a car may be—how fine the parts or great the skill with which they are made and fitted—certain attention is necessary from time to time. Then, it is essential that men who know the Ford car in every part, men who work with precision machinery and accustomed fingers, should do the servicing or make the repairs.

Your neighborhood Ford dealer therefore is the man to see when you need service, parts, or accessories of any kind. His clean, well-ordered shops are equipped with factory-endorsed service machinery. The parts used are genuine Ford parts—high in quality, low in cost.

Ford service is always most economical—always dependable and safe—but at this particular time, when many cars require extra attention, special prices are in effect. Drive into the nearby Ford Service Department and ask about them. A free inspection will be made of your car. You will know the cost of the work you order before it's started—and will find it agreeably low.

MURDER OF THE NIGHT CLUB LADY

Search Made of Lola's Rooms

[illegible]

"Miss Carewe," he asked, "is this the bag you carried at Mayfair tonight?"

It was an envelope pouch of seed pearls

"Why, no," answered Lola. "It does not belong to me—it is Christine's—my house guest. She must have forgotten to take it with her."

"Odd!" remarked Colt "It's wet—as if it had been out in the storm!"

L[illegible] as [illegible] deeper meaning to [illegible] word. Colt [illegible]

"Does your mother know of this threat against your life?" he now asked, apparently dismissing the purse

"No—please—and you must not worry her."

Then why did you let her know the police were here?" demanded Colt

"Well—she will have to be told, won't she?" demanded Lola, with unabashed inconsistency. Waiting for no reply, she led the way down a narrow corridor. Colt made no further comment, as our party followed her

We [illegible] a breakfast-room [illegible] mostly with [illegible] many of them in [illegible] a kitchen where [illegible] over an electric stove and [illegible] on into a guest-room Lola explained this was [illegible] by Christine Quires her closest friend It was a pretty furnished room, with four windows opening on a sheer drop of 23 floors to the street. There were temporary articles lying on the bureau in which Colt displayed more than an idle interest. In this room as in all the others Colt examined the closets and made a deliberate survey of all available hiding-places

"How long has Christine Quires been living with you?" he asked, lingering at the door

"About three months now."

"How long have you known her?"

"About three years."

"And where is she tonight?"

"Out at the new Lion's Paw Club. I had expected to join her there—until I read that note."

"Did she leave before you?"

"Yes!"

Colt seemed about to continue this inquiry, then, glancing at his watch, thought better of it and passed on, down a corridor that led from the guest-room into another small room, reserved for Lola's mother

At Lola's knock the door was immediately opened, and a tall old woman straight and strong stood looking at us Her face was dark shrewd and thoughtful—yet a cheerful face with arched brows deep-set eyes and small, pointed ears Of Mrs Carewe, Colt once said she had the strong body and the well-chiseled head of a lioness

"You're home early, Lola," she murmured. "Why all these policemen——"

"So many jewel robberies, mother—I'll explain later. I was sorry to awaken you——"

"I was reading The New Atlantis again. Lot of good sense in that book."

She smiled at Colt as if she were imparting a secret There was a faint foreign accent in her carefully pronounced words Lola quickly presented her naming her mother as Mrs Carewe

"You must sit down and rest yourself, Lola," insisted Mrs. Carewe. "You have been worrying too much. Chung is right. Chung has been talking to me tonight. He says we all think too much of death around here. He says death is not important. But he's a heathen. Even when he's right, I don't like him. He gives me chills when he grins and talks the way he does. I don't like grinning people."

As the mother said this, the sharp old eyes were turned directly upon Vincent Rowland

"Mother darling, I want to show these gentlemen your room. You don't object?"

The old woman shook her head

"I have not objected all my life. There is nothing left for me to object to now."

And Mrs. Carewe sat down and returned calmly to her book.

The old lady's room was in reproachful contrast to all the wealth and elegance surrounding it. For herself, Mrs. Carewe elected a chamber with bare walls—not even one picture adorned it The bed was like a servant's cot, of white painted iron rods, and with plain coverings of a cheap sort. There was one straight-backed chair, in which she now sat

"We used to be poor," confided Lola, "and mother never changes."

Colt pried into closets, looked under the bed, and glanced out of the window—far down the dizzy drop to the street

"Would you like to see my room now?" prompted Lola.

If the mother's room had been a surprise, the daughter's was even more of an astonishment.

Copyright, 1932, by Covici-Friede, Inc.

Athlete's Foot Contagious, But Often Easily Cured

—By DR. R. S. COPELAND—

I AM GLAD the authorities are seeking to simplify the terms used in medicine There are too many which convey little meaning, to the public, certainly

Among such is "Dermatomycosis Trichophtina." These are indeed large and difficult words to pronounce

Dr. Copeland.

This term merely means "ringworm," an infectious disease of the skin. The infection is caused by a parasite or fungus called the "trichophyton fungus."

Recently there have been many articles about the so-called "athlete's foot." This affliction is really ringworm. It is merely a form of that disease involving the feet. The more familiar ringworm is most frequently seen on the scalp and face.

Ringworm of the body begins as a flat, reddish spot. This spreads, clearing up in the center, resulting in a ringed appearance The ring represents the active sign of the disease

After reaching its full size, the ringworm may remain stationary Within a few days or weeks it disappears entirely, only to reappear elsewhere on the body

Ringworm may occur anywhere on the body, but it is most commonly found on the scalp, face, neck, hands and forearms Less frequently it affects the soles of the feet, or the palms of the hands. It is called athlete's foot when the infection involves the soles of the feet and the skin between the toes.

The treatment for the disease depends upon the use of a solution which will destroy the parasite If the disease is on the surface of the skin this destruction is accomplished without any difficulty. When it is more deep-seated the treatment is more difficult

THE AUTOMATIC REFRIGERATOR is certainly one of the greatest conveniences in the modern home Yet many of us demand little more service of the automatic refrigerator than they did of the old-fashioned ice box, and fail to make use of its most wonderful features—the freezing unit

"Yes, home-made frozen desserts are delicious, but it takes so long to prepare them," they object. We'll admit that the preparation of a custard base for ice cream does require a great deal of time But, listen Now you can make a PERFECT VANILLA ICE CREAM with no cooking with only four ingredients required that takes only 10 minutes, that uses fewer utensils and cost you less

Here is the recipe, and I have recipes for 19 other ice creams just as smooth-textured and delicious Each one has been tested and tasted with infinite patience, and you can be sure they will turn out perfectly every time. Here is the secret, we use a product which has proved to be most nearly perfect as a natural base—sweetened condensed milk. The brand we use in the Martha Lee Cooking School is rich full cream milk smoothly blended with fine sugar and made doubly rich by the removal of 60 per cent of the water content. The perfect blending and pre-cooking of the milk and sugar render the crystals formed during the freezing process smaller finer and rounder than when any other ingredients are used as a base

VANILLA ICE CREAM

- 2-3 cup condensed milk
- ½ cup water
- 1½ tsps. vanilla
- 1 cup whipping cream

Mix condensed milk, water and vanilla thoroughly. Chill. Whip cream to custard-like consistency and fold into chilled mixture Pour into freezing pan. Place in freezing unit. After mixture has frozen to a stiff mush (one or two hours) remove from refrigerator. Scrape mixture from sides and bottom of pan. Beat two minutes. Smooth out and replace in freezing unit for one hour or until frozen for serving. (Two to four hours, total freezing time.)

FRESH STRAWBERRY ICE CREAM

- 2-3 cup condensed milk
- ½ cup water
- 1 cup strawberries crushed
- ¼ cup 4X sugar
- 1 cup whipping cream

Mix condensed milk and water thoroughly. Add strawberries which have been crushed and sweetened with 4X sugar. (The average strawberries require about ¼ cup of 4X sugar.)

Daily True Story

A Cabbie's Luck

THE PEOPLE in Baxter have long since given up hope of learning where old Pete Wilhide gets his money.

All they know is that on the first of every month he gets a letter from a New York bank. There's money in the letter—they're sure of that. But that's all they are sure of

"Oh, that's an investment I made when I was up in New York," is the only answer Pete ever gave when the overly curious asked him.

LEAVES FOR CITY

It was 20 years and more ago that Pete left his native mountain town and went to New York He was a middle-aged man then rather shiftless, garrulous and improvident, but well learned in human nature. A kind-hearted man, too

"Oh, I guess I can drive a hack," Pete said when people asked him what he was going to do up there in the city. New York was but little more than a name to Pete and his fellow villagers then. But Pete had the itch to travel and away he went

It happened one morning Pete was driving along slowly when he heard someone call, "Cab." He looked up and saw a woman coming down the steps of a brownstone house She carried a suitcase in each hand and behind her came a man who seemed to be pleading with her Pete drew up to the curb and said, "Yes ma'am?"

"Take me to the Cunard pier and hurry, please," said the woman. The man said, "Nina, won't you listen a moment, please. I can explain everything if you will only listen to me." He attempted to detain her, but she shook off his hand and got into the hack. "Hurry," she directed Pete

Pete looked at the man and said, "Sorry, mister. But I guess I got to do what my fare tells me." He drove off, with the woman again telling him to hurry.

NEEDED A FRIEND

"Well, now, ma'am," said Pete, "that horse is doing the best he can. He's a little lame and I can't force him. You just take it easy now and don't get excited. Was that your husband back there?"

So Pete continued to talk, half to himself and half to his passenger.

"I guess you're runnin' away from him, ain't you?" he said "Well, I've seen a lot of husbands in my time and weren't none of them perfect. Maybe one of them gets a little drunk now and then or doesn't show up for dinner until it's stone cold or just can't seem to hold a job nohow. Yes, ma'am, men are pretty much alike and gettin' married don't seem to change 'em much."

Pete "clucked" to his horse and turned a corner

Pete heard a sob from the seat behind him and again turned a corner

"Course," he said, "if there ain't any love there ain't much use tryin'. But if you love a person you can't run away from it No, ma'am. There's always some of you stays behind."

The cab had merely circled several blocks and was back in front of the brownstone house

The woman looked up and then she jumped from the cab and ran up the steps. Pete saw her husband meet her at the door and saw their arms go about each other. Again he "clucked" to his horse and drove slowly off.

RETURNS BAGS

It wasn't until that evening that Pete found the bags the woman had left in the cab. He took them back and when the husband saw him he said, "Why didn't you wait? I've been searching all over town for you. I think I would have killed myself if you hadn't brought my wife back to me. She told me about it."

There isn't much more to tell. The husband gave Pete a job as his own coachman and when Pete was injured in a runaway and went back to Baxter the letters began to arrive on the first of every month

FANNING

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Give Dempsey His Due.
Ring's Biggest Asset.
Made No Idle Boasts.
He Lets Fists Talk.
Real Test Tomorrow.
Levinsky a Slugger.

LIKE JOHN L., JACK IS ON THE LEVEL

Let's be fair with Jack Dempsey. Let's be fair with the old Man Killer. Some of the boys are getting pretty loose in their talk about the greatest fighter of them all. They hint his underpinnings are so weak he needs crutches. With innuendoes and smirks they whisper of frameups and dives and going-in-the-tanks. Words—mere words! Loose words, which if they are not actual lies are founded on nothing but gossip and cannot be proven. Dempsey says nothing. He is letting his actions speak for him. For a year now with only a few rests in between, the old Man Killer has been ploughing steadily through his exhibition itinerary, going into the little towns and big towns bowling them over right and left. Mostly third-raters and yokels. But some pretty good men scattered among the Dempsey opponents. As timing and wind and hitting picked up Dempsey began to take on stronger opponents. He will get his first real test when he takes on King Levinsky in Chicago, tomorrow night. If the old Man Killer finds he isn't "there," he'll be the first to acknowledge it. The game never boasted a fairer, squarer sportsman than Jack Dempsey.

"Why, the Dempsey-Levinsky thing isn't a fight at all," roar some of the ones who seemed scared to death that the fellow, who did more than anyone else to make the gates other boxers have profitted from again, will get back into the big money. "It's only a four-round exhibition with the big ten-ounce gloves." Yes that's just what it is. Dempsey claims nothing else. But Jack has given more real fighting in his "exhibitions" than most scrappers do in 15-round "fights." What other fighter do you know Mister Cynic, who can knock 'em out of their brogans with the ten-ounce gloves? What leading fighter do you know with "guts" enough to go through the year's campaign the old Man Killer subjected himself to?

KING LEVINSKY

The short bouts and ten-ounce pillows haven't stopped the old Man Killer from knocking 'em bowlegged. What other fighter except Ernie Schaaf do you know who could knock them on the ear with the big pillows on? Don't say Dempsey's opponents have been taking a dive. Jack is no Carnera. Besides, he has been watched too closely for anything phoney to be arranged. There would surely have been some "squeal." Like Sullivan, Dempsey is on the level. A fighter doesn't get bruised and cut up in tank settings. Jack Dempsey will enter the ring against King Levinsky sporting three stitches over his eyes from a wound received in last week's bout with K. O. Christner. So Christner took a dive for the old Man Killer, eh? Bosh!

Dempsey never can be the great fighter he once was. But the old Man Killer doesn't need to be half his old fighting self to lick most of the heavyweights which are cluttering up the ring. As long as the old Manassa Mauler boasts that deadly left hook to wind or chin and the crashing right-hander to heart and jaw he has a chance against any heavyweight in the world. We don't even know whether Jack Dempsey in his heart of hearts intends a real comeback against Schmeling, Sharkey or the giant Carnera. He is picking up money in ten thousand-dollar gobs regularly in the four-round exhibitions. Perhaps that is only his real object. But we're not going to hang Jack Dempsey without something really to judge him on. The old Man Killer has said nothing about his future intentions, made no boasts about his ability to whip Schmeling, Sharkey and the top rankers. "I'm trying myself out," is all he has said. He's just gone ahead engaging in his four-round "exhibitions" and knocked many of his opponents silly with the big gloves on. You certainly can't hang him for that.

TOMMY LOUGHRAN

The old Man Killer is taking a real chance tomorrow night. He is taking a bigger chance against a hitting fool like King Levinsky than he would be against a clever smart fighter. King Levinsky is more liable to nail Jack Dempsey with a wild haymaker from out of nowhere than he was to land one on the supposedly clever and smart Tommy Loughran. And don't forget Levinsky had Loughran going up and down like an elevator. Say what you will about Jack Dempsey you can't question his sincerity when he is willing to jeopardize his all by getting in the ring with a hitter like King Levinsky. Can you picture Herr Schmeling or Mister Sharkey taking a chance against Levinsky for what Jack Dempsey will receive, tomorrow night? Not by a jugful!

Boxing owes its all to Jack Dempsey. He's the fellow who made the million-dollar gates, the fellow that put boxing on a sphere never dreamed of. If an element among the fight gentry so jealous they are scared to death to say something nice for the old Man Killer, don't appreciate what Dempsey has done, still is doing, for boxing, the general public does. Jack Dempsey was, still is, closer to the hearts of the sports public than any other hero was or probably ever will be. He's been on the square. Give the Old Boy a square deal, himself. Withhold judgment on him until something can be had to judge him by. If Jack Dempsey is pasted out of the picture by King Levinsky tomorrow night, you'll see Dempsey take it with a grin and without a squawk. The "squawkers" should take a lesson from Dempsey.

Peterson Does Tricks With Billiard Balls

Chicago, Feb 17 (INS)—Charles Petersonn, St. Louis, was once more in the lead in the world's championship fancy billiard match today.

The St. Louisan played brilliantly and exhibited remarkable execution of seemingly impossible shots, to defeat Isidro Ribas of Spain, European champion and present challenger, here last night.

BRUINS STILL IN HOCKEY FIGHT

By BILL GRIMES

Due to their victories over Toronto and Americans, the Bruins and Maroons have improved their chances of reaching the playoffs.

Playing the most intelligent brand of hockey they have shown this season, the Bruins shut out the Toronto Maple Leafs 3 to 0 at the Boston Garden while the Maroons swamped the Americans to the tune of 7 to 1.

The Detroit Falcons came from behind to tie the New York Rangers in Madison Square Garden and they are now deadlocked with the Rossmen for third place in the American Division. As the Bruins and Falcons are scheduled to meet in the Flivver City tomorrow night the situation is ideal, for a capacity house will turn out to see these clubs fight it out for possession of third place.

The Maroons are now sole owners of the last playoff berth in the International Division. They have been traveling at a championship pace for the past two weeks, during which they have won four games in five starts. They leave for New York today for another game with the Amerks.

Marty Barry Puts Bruins Out Front

After a scoreless first period at the Garden Marty Barry put the Bruins out in front by taking a snappy pass from Dit Clapper, late in the second chapter. Less than four minutes before the final whistle, Art Chapman stole the puck from Happy Day and scored the second Bruin goal and then Yank Boyd came up with the third and final tally, when he caught the entire Toronto club down the ice.

The Bruins played heads up hockey from start to finish. Only when the Maple Leafs were short handed did the Bruins go on any of their famous four and five man forays. They paid particular attention to their defense, affording Tiny Thompson the best protection he has received this season. Tiny did not have as much work to do as did Lorne Chabot but at that he made a number of sensational saves.

The game was one of the cleanest the Bruins and Toronto have ever played, though the play was fast.

The Bruins now start on an all important trip. They are listed for a game with the Falcons in Detroit tomorrow night and then go into Chicago for a Sunday night engagement with the Blackhawks.

The Falcons are particularly strong on their home ice. Of the 33 points they have won this season, 27 have been awarded after contests in the Olympia. They have won only one road game this season but have been deadlocked four times in away from home tilts.

With 12 victories and one tie at home, the Falcons are favored to take the Bruins tomorrow night but if the Rossmen play as they did against Toronto, Jack Adams' charges have a real assignment on their hands.

Racing Suspended at Agua Caliente

Agua Caliente, Mex., Feb. 17 (INS)—For the second day, and for the second time this season, racing had been suspended at the Agua Caliente track today. Heavy rains made the track unusable. Officials hoped to resume Friday.

STILL STOWING 'EM IN CAMPHOR!

Passing the Puck

By BILL GRIMES

After three attempts, the Bruins scored their first victory over Toronto at the Boston Garden. And to make it a perfect evening, they shut out the Maple Leafs, 3 to 0.

Cooney Weiland has been demoted to the third line. He is now paired with Yank Boyd and Paul Runge. The Dynamiters look more formidable with Frank Jerwa at center than they did when Weiland was acting as their playmaker.

George Owen should pay more attention to his own game and less to that of the other Bruins. There was no excuse for Owen giving Marty Barry a hard look because he happened to be over the line on one of the former Harvard star's rushes.

The Bruins did not put on their famous power play until Harvey Jackson, the clever Toronto winger, had been exiled for holding.

Paul Runge broke in as a major leaguer with a vengeance. He is the only Cub who has been at ease playing with the Bruins. He was in every play and gave a fine account of himself both on the offense and defense.

Once again Tiny Thompson demonstrated that all he needs to be the Tiny of old is some protection. Tiny did not have as much to do as Lorne Chabot but whenever the shots were on him he kicked them out in great style.

Frank Carson, who has an average of better than a point a game, came through with the goal that gave the Detroit Falcons a tie with the New York Rangers. Carson has totaled 19 points since he [illegible] been [illegible]

Marty Barry came up with another goal last night. The popular Bruin is more of an asset as a wing than he was at center. Barry took a pass from Dit Clapper, who had stolen the puck from Happy Day, for the first tally.

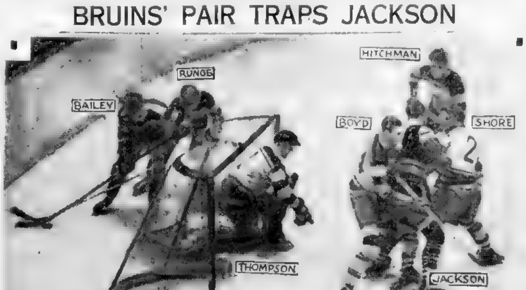
[illegible] George Owen [illegible] the Bruins go into a four man [illegible]. It is a dangerous [illegible] scoring [illegible] and Maroon.

[illegible] the clever [illegible] wing man to St. [illegible] College in Toronto [illegible] one of the very few [illegible] who believe that there are any hockey players in the State. [illegible] is responsible for [illegible] George Owen and Myles Lane entering the professional ranks.

Melrose and Medford high [illegible] off in an informal game for the championship of the Greater Boston league Friday night in the Garden.

If the Bruins were well primed on the rules, Harry Oliver would not take so many passes standing still at the blue line. According to the rules, it is possible for Oliver or, of course, any other player, who is on the line, to enter the center zone as soon as the pass is started, instead of waiting for the puck to go over the line.

BRUINS' PAIR TRAPS JACKSON



Yank Boyd and Eddie Shore effectively trapped Jackson of the Maple Leafs in front of the Bruins' net as Bailey strove to carry around and pass to his mate. The job was thorough, for Jackson never had a chance to make the shot. Bruins took the verdict, 3 to 0.

SWISS STUDENT WINS TITLE

Mt. Van Hoevenberg, Lake Placid, Feb. 17 (AP)—Reto Capadrutt, 19-year-old Swiss college student, today won the North American and A. A. U. two-man bob sled championships in two runs down an Olympic slide, slowed by overnight snow. His times were 2.07.98 and 2.09.79, total 4.14.77.

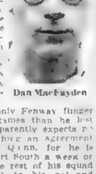
Second to Capadrutt today was J. Hubert Stevens of Lake Placid, who won the Olympic title last week in a thrilling brush with the young European racer. Capadrutt finished second.

Stevens' total time was 4.25.39, 11 seconds slower than Capadrutt made.

Henry Homburger of Saranac Lake, winner yesterday of the four-man North American championships, was third. Ray Stevens of Lake Placid fourth, Gilbert Colgate Jr. and Harry Grayson Martin of New York, sixth.

M'FAYDEN IS BACK HOME

Danny MacFayden, bespectacled ace of the Red Sox pitching staff, visited Fenway Park today to talk over his 193_ contract with Pres. Bob Quinn, only to learn that the "prexy" is in Columbus, O. and won't be back until late in the week.



Dan MacFayden

The Somerville boy appeared in the best of shape after his two-month sojourn at Hebron Academy in Maine where he has been the hockey coach for several seasons.

Danny, the only Fenway flinger to win more games than he lost last season, apparently expects no trouble in reaching an agreement with President Quinn, for he is planning to start South a week or more before the rest of his squad to pay a visit to his pal and roomie, Jack Russell, who is residing in Gainesville, Fla.

May Reduce Racing Program of N. Y.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 17 (INS)—Necessity of cutting down the overhead may result in a five day or possibly a four day racing week at New York metropolitan tracks next summer, according to Joseph E. Widener, chairman of the Jockey Club.

Widener declared New York racing associations were faced with an even larger deficit than last year and that there was need for a more definite assured source of revenue to maintain the standard of thoroughbred racing around New York.

Hockey Giggles

— By BILL GRIMES —

After the Bruins had become well fed up on Jimmie Herberts [illegible] over the traces, they [illegible] ended to sell this unruly center [illegible] to Toronto for the mere sum of $12,500.

Toronto was advised of Herberts' possibilities and also of the best way to handle him. Jimmie stopped off in Montreal on his way to Toronto and he was well set when he reported to Connie Smythe for duty.

The Maple Leafs were playing Chicago the night Herberts arrived and the former Bruin was held in reserve. Finally a condition arose whereby it was necessary to insert Sir James in the ball game. When Jimmie received the order to go into the conflict, he leaped from the bench and dashed for the opening to the ice.

Unfortunately, Herberts' feet were [illegible] along the lines of violin cases and when he attempted to [illegible] the exit, he tripped and went sprawling on the ice.

As Connie Smythe was more or less disgusted with his newcomer by this time, he yelled, "What's the matter with you? Why don't you look where you're trying to put those bass viol cases?"

"It's not the fault of the feet. The gate's too narrow," replied Sir James.

Between the call he had received from Smythe and his unorthodox entrance, Jimmie was more or less befuddled and as a result he lined up with the Chicago club, which was the last straw for Connie Smythe. He opened negotiations that night with Jack Adams of Detroit and the former Bruin star's stay in Toronto was soon brought to a close.

Art Hit Red Sox Like Texas Hurricane

[illegible] the career of Arthur the Great Shires [illegible] of the Braves, written by Joe Cashman, baseball expert of the Boston Evening American [illegible] Watch for them!

The worst hurricane in Texas history couldn't have been any more devastating than the lad from the Lone Star State proved to the Red Sox in his first big league [illegible] [illegible] one of the best right-handers in [illegible] and his reputation.

Art Surprised at Easy Triple First Time Up

With that same supreme confidence which characterized his high school, college and minor league careers, the newcomer stepped to the plate in the very first inning, calmly and deliberately picked out [illegible] he'll be winded and pushed [illegible] the distant center field bar [illegible] for a triple.

"They're softer to hit up here than in Waco," mused Art, as he galloped around the bases.

"Just a mistake," opined the handful of fans who witnessed the debut of the most colorful player to break in since Babe Ruth came up from Baltimore back in 1914.

That afternoon and, for that matter, for the remainder of the '28 campaign, Shires was right and the fans wrong.

He faced "Ruff" four more times in that contest, made three more safeties and hit the ball hard on every trip to the plate. He played 43 more games before the season ended and finished up with a mark of .341, much better than he ever [illegible] Waco.

In the "big town" he continued his remarkable hitting, made a few more writers acquainted with his "greatness," and spent his bankroll on a wardrobe that would have made the Prince of Wales envious.

By the time he reached Chicago, the scribes were calling him the freshest, flashiest and yet the most capable rookie of the decade.

They didn't know the half of it, as you will learn tomorrow.

JUST FOLLOW THESE RULES

1. Each day for 36 consecutive days (except Sundays) the Boston American will print a Washington Patriotic Prize Puzzle. In each puzzle an historic event in Washington's life will be named. You are invited to solve the puzzle and name the event. The puzzles will be printed in 6 weekly series, each series complete and each series having its own prize awards.

2. The Boston American will give each week valuable awards to the persons who send in the nearest correctly solved puzzles in accordance with these rules. Winning a prize one week does not prevent competition in following weeks.

3. This offer is open to everyone—men, women, boys and girls—except employees of the Hearst newspapers in Boston and members of their families. There is nothing to pay . . . merely a test of your skill and knowledge.

4. Puzzles must be submitted each week, each series of six in a complete set for that week. Do NOT send in each puzzle separately.

5. Each set of six puzzles must be in the mail no later than midnight on Tuesday following publication of the last puzzle in each series. Address "WASHINGTON PATRIOTIC PUZZLE EDITOR," Boston American, P. O. Box 185, Boston, Mass.

6. Each entry must be sent by First Class Mail, postage prepaid. Entries with insufficient postage will be returned by the Post Office. Be careful to have your name and address on each puzzle. Make your entry simple and neat. Neatness will count.

7. You need not buy the Boston American in order to compete. You may make an accurate copy, or trace the puzzles and send them in. The Boston American may be examined at 5 Winthrop Square or at Public Libraries free of charge.

8. No entries will be returned.

9. The judges will be appointed by the Boston American. Their decisions will be final. In case of ties a duplicate award will be given to each tying contestant. Your entry in the competition denotes acceptance of all existing rules or any that may be made during the time of contest.

10. The Boston American reserves the right to alter or amend these rules at any time.

Third Week's Prizes

FOR SERIES C PUZZLES

6th to 10th Prizes. 2 guest tickets to see "The Hatchet Man," with Edward G. Robinson, at Washington St. Olympia Theatre, or the current attraction.

11th to 20th Prizes. Single guest ticket to Washington St. Olympia Theatre.

VERBAL WAR RAGING ON FOOTBALL FRONT

HALL DEFENDS NEW GRID RULINGS

New York, Feb. 17—All is not quiet on the football front! The coaches' paens of praise and cries of condemnation continue to rise regarding the football rules changes announced the other day.

And while the p[illegible] and praises do n[illegible] as far as the rulings [illegible] concerned interest in the matter [illegible] hot.

E. K. Hall, chairman of the rules committee, says that the new rulings make things easier for the officials. Hall says that the disqualification and half distance to goal penalty for illegal use of hands will curb rabbit punching, etc., by defensive linemen.

Heartley Anderson Notre Dame mentor has a different angle on the use of hands ruling. "Hunk" states that the new ruling will make it almost impossible for the small, fast lineman to engage in college football now without the use of his hands for protection.

Another statement which has gained wide attention is that of Dr. Eddie O'Brien famed Boston referee who is known as an absolutely fearless official.

Dr. O'Brien has said that the severe penalty on the use of hands is almost certain to cause officials who are not of the strongest type to dodge the issue, and fail to call the infraction because of the severity of the penalty.

The stigma attached to disqualification, which always has persuaded many officials to refrain from putting a man out of a game is likely to be existent regarding the use of hands ruling especially as many officials feel that the penalty is too heavy.

Stagg Says Rule Change Will Not Alter Game

Chicago, Feb. 17 (AP) Amos Alonzo Stagg, Sr., dean of the country's football coaches and senior member of the rules committee, believes the changes in the playing code will take nothing from the game from the spectators' viewpoint and will mean much to coaches and players.

Mr. Stagg who will coach his 41st University of Chicago squad next fall, agrees with other members of the committee that the alterations are the most constructive since 1906, and today predicted that the benefits will soon become evident.

Objections against some of the changes, particularly those barring flying blocking and tackling, will, he believes, be forgotten when they are fully understood.

Dedham and Beverly First to Try New Rules

To Dedham and Beverly high school football teams will go the honor of being the first to use the new football rules.

Final arrangements were completed today for a cha[illegible] on April 16 when Dedham [illegible] coached by Jack Heaphy former Boston College and all-American center, will close its spring practice session against Beverly high coached by the veteran, Bodger Carroll.

The proceeds will be given to the welfare organizations of both cities represented.

McLEOD POSTS $5000 FORFEIT

Farmer George McLeod believe in saying it on the dotted line. He today signed a three-bout contract with Paul Bowser calling for him to meet Nick Lutze, Jim Browning, and Henri DeGlane in the event he wins from Gus Sonnenberg in their finish tussle, best two falls out of three, at the Arena tomorrow night.

Bowser also insisted that McLeod post a forfeit of $5000 to guarantee that he lives up to his end of the agreement. Paul realizes he made a mistake when he failed to make Henri DeGlane post a substantial forfeit when he agreed to clash with the winner of the Browning-Lutze bout.

Paul Host Elected Notre Dame Captain

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 17 (AP) Paul Host of La Crosse, Wis., will lead the fighting Irish of Notre Dame into football battle next autumn. Host last night was elected captain of the 1932 team at the annual Monogram banquet.

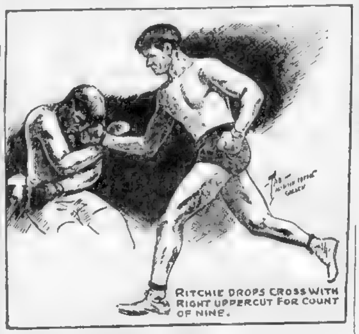
When Ritchie, Cross Waged Bloody Fight

THE THRILLING THIRD ROUND



RITCHIE DROPS CROSS WITH RIGHT UPPERCUT FOR COUNT OF NINE.

This series of "Finishes of Old-Time Fights" is printed in the sport pages of the Boston Evening American.

Today we give you the Willie Ritchie-Leach Cross battle, fought at old Madison Square Garden, November 10, 1913. It was one of the most sensational fights ever held in New York and Cross came close to winning the title from Ritchie who was champion at the time.

By W. S. FARNSWORTH

A championship fight of the old school. It was staged for 1[illegible],000 silk-hatted and sweater-clad New Yorkers.

It was ten rounds of the old-time blood, blows and delirium. And at the finish Willie Ritchie the lightweight champion was a battered but decided winner over Leach Cross, the idol of the East Side.

A Bloody Battle

It was one of the bloodiest ring battles this writer ever saw—a fight that had the jammed Garden screaming from the first tap of the gong to the last. Round after round the two perfectly trained youths blood-dyed and bruised sprang at each other in a dizzy uproar of oaths and curses and hoarse calls of encouragement.

There was scarcely a moment in the thirty minutes of fighting when both were not striking and swinging with every pound of strength. Their lips were puffed and split, great purple bumps stood out on cheek-bones and temples, slashed across with deep cuts.

They Never Stop Fighting

Smears of clotted red spread out from their swollen noses and at times they spit blood with every breath, like jets from a punctured artery. But again they rushed upon each other and put their blood-soaked and shapeless heads together and pounded with both hands until the mob was frenzied.

Twice Cross was down under the fearful assault. Once the champion staggered from a terrific blow on the jaw. But a minute later they were doggedly back, giving and taking as before. Their hair was matted and stuck to their foreheads in thick strings. Their breath came in thick, quick gasps. Their blows gradually lost the power to shock and could only cut and bruise, though they panted with effort to drive them home. But the last bell found them on their feet, glaring at each other with blackened and distorted eyes.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

JACK SLATTERY, Braves scout, is back from one of those West Indies cruises and is talking baseball. Jack still believes the national pastime is the greatest sport in the world. So do millions of American youngsters who would like to be hitting the Southern trail with one of the major league clubs.

With the ad[illegible] of the [illegible] to the training camps it can well be said that Old Doc Spring is just around the corner.

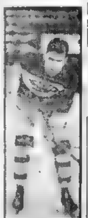
Mr. Boston

I AM GOING to drop down to Quincy for that testimonial dinner the gang is going to give Percy N. L[illegible], able sports editor of the Quincy Evening News at 7:30 p. m. Everybody in sports along the South Shore will be on hand to pay tribute to Lane. I like to see someb[illegible] other than Mr. Anonymous Letter Writer pay attention to a sports editor who is doing a good job.

FATHER BILL CUDDY called me on the telephone to remind me that the St. Joe's will be back in the amateur boxing field on Saturday night at Mechanics Building. There will be contests at 112, 126, 135, 147, 160 and 175 pounds. All classes will be open. Father B[illegible] says he has received a [illegible] number of entries and there will be as much action as the Japs and Chinese are furnishing.

SPEAKING OF China reminds me that Young Happy (Mr. Moses Rubinovitch to you) still holds all Chinese boxing titles. He became champion of all Chinese classes from the flyweight division right through the heavyweight group when he licked Harry Ah Chung of Salem by way of China at Eddie Keevin's old American A. C. Hap tells me he received $17.50 for his victory which was a lot of money in those days. China has yet to send forth a boxer who could regain the lost ring honors.

I [illegible] Mr. and Mrs. William Kinneally of Newton who went to Florida with Mr. and Mrs. Jack Sharkey have [illegible] of their trip so far. Since last Thursday when the stock market started to rise the [illegible] fans [illegible].



Myles Lane

MYLES LANE, new Boston University coach, dropped in to say he is [illegible]. Boston University was fortunate in being able to secure the services of the former Dartmouth hero. Lane knows football [illegible] has the ability to teach it to others. Boston University has not occupied a very conspicuous position in the football world, but with Lane in charge conditions should improve.

IF GUS SONNENBERG gets by Farmer McLeod at the Arena tomorrow night how are Henri DeGlane and Jim Browning going to be able to dodge him? Sonny has the flare that appeals to the public's imagination. He has made wrestling a major sport. There are many folks who would like to see him win back his lost championship.

DeGlane Must Agree to Take on Browning

HENRI DEGLANE, world's champion, cannot possibly avoid going through with his bout with Jim Browning. Besides the legal matters involved, the American fans will run the Frenchman out if he refuses to give Browning a return match. The public insists on fair play to worthy challengers. The sooner DeGlane takes the match the better it will be for himself as well as for the wrestling [illegible]

It Cost Canadian Arena $60 to Say Fan Threw Bottle

Montreal, Que., Feb. 17 (AP)—Because the Canadian Arena Co. declined to let him buy a ticket for a hockey game here last spring, Leon Lafrance of Montreal has been awarded $60 damages by Circuit Court Justice Joseph Archambault.

During the fourth game of the Stanley cup series between the Montreal Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks last April a bottle crashed on the ice almost striking Referee Bobby Hewitson on the head. An attendant claimed he had seen Lafrance throw the bottle.

When Lafrance appeared at the box office to buy a ticket for the fifth game he was refused unless he would sign a declaration setting forth his intentions of keeping the peace during the game. This he refused to do and the company declined to sell him a ticket.

HOPE RISES; WILL IT CREEP OVER U. S.?

By B. C. Forbes

CREDIT MAKES the mare go. Will the new hopefulness in the financial world spread to business and industry? Let it become evident that more jobs are being created—then note the release of demand rigidly held back, never did America have so much money hidden away in vaults and homes.

One of these days the people, tired of un-American frugality, will decide to resume their normal mode of living. Then you will see a much more impressive stampede to buy goods than the latest stampede to buy stocks, although this stampede sent prices up an average of 20 per cent in seven hours' trading.

We can refrain from being our natural selves only for a time. The period of pinching and scraping and hoarding has already lasted astonishingly long. Certain as the rising sun is it that it won't last forever.

Demand Everywhere When Tide Turns

Down in Texas recently, relates Thomas Dreier, a man asked Jack Dionne where business is to come from even after the [illegible]. He couldn't see where the [illegible]. Jack [illegible] told [illegible] a story from Scott's "Lady of the Lake."

"The King of Scotland, traveling in the mountains of Scotland incognito, became lost and was being guided out of the mountain fastnesses by a huge mountaineer whom he had chanced upon—none other than the King's chief enemy, also incognito, Roderic Dhu, leader of an insurgent mountain army.

"As they walked they talked politics, and the King bitterly condemned the outlaw Roderic Dhu, finally expresseing the wish that he might meet face to fact this rebel chieftain and his band.

" 'Have then thy wish!' Roderic cried, and blew his whistle.

"Instantly the lonely mountainside was covered with an army of mountaineers, fully equipped for war. Every tree, every bush, every rock, every tuft of grass gave forth a soldier. One minute there was not a man; the next there was an army."

Dreier aptly adds:

"So it has always been, and so it will be this time with business. It comes from everywhere when the tide turns."

Postal Savings Need Promotion

What imbecility it is to hide cash in old cans or mattresses, exposing it to the dangers of theft and fire when it would cost little effort to hand the money to the post office, have it taken care of by the United States government and receive $2 a year for every hundred dollars deposited. No sane person can offer the slightest reason for not choosing this more sensible course. Not even the most excitable fanatic can imagine for a moment that the United States is going broke, unable to repay savings deposited with it.

Postal savings facilities should be brought more forcefully to popular attention.

Lehigh Coal Earns $1.07 Share in 1931

Consolidated net income of Lehigh Coal & Navigation Co. for the year 1931 after expenses, interest and taxes and including company's proportion of undistributed earnings and losses of subsidiaries was $2,062,977, equal to $1.07 a share on 1,929,065 shares.

In the year 1930, consolidated net income was $2,189,729, or $1.13 a share. The above amounts, however, do not include company's proportion of undistributed earnings of other companies in which it has substantial but not controlling holdings.

Jersey Standard Cuts Retail "Gas"

Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey today cut the retail price of gasoline one-half cent a gallon throughout its entire territory with the exception of Delaware. The company is making no change in the tank wagon price in the territory affected, but will allow dealers an additional one-half cent a gallon discount.

STATE ST. Hears:

That even though brokers are cheered by the ability of prices to regain their highs of last week, they are adopting a cautious attitude. In the majority of cases they suggest clients stand pat on present commitments. The use of stops is advocated for those unwilling to accept profits on a scale, if an additional burst of strength materializes. Obviously there is more than a little suspicion that selling of an important character is taking place.

The Situation

[illegible] on Monday [illegible] position [illegible] a corner [illegible] the [illegible] able [illegible] upward. Some short [illegible] proved ex[illegible] for the bulls. However [illegible] postponed the [illegible] reaction which [illegible] hep today or tomorrow. [illegible] there were the usual in[illegible] the making [illegible].

The number of issues traded climbed above 670 on both Monday and Tuesday, accompanied by volume indicative of large scale profit taking. At the same time [illegible] [illegible] their best [illegible] the rally. Those who [illegible] [illegible] to accept [illegible] of [illegible] strength.

Commodity Prices

A recent survey of London financial [illegible] that many brokers in that center expected the [illegible] to commodity prices would come from a shortage. In view of [illegible] opinion it seemed well to examine the possibility of such an occurrence in this country. At the [illegible] it would be stated that a shortage [illegible] not [illegible] even though conditions are developing that should help cut down present surpluses. If grain [illegible] on hand are moved into consumptive channels there is no doubt about higher futures prices.

Using the report of the condition of December wheat as a base it begins to look as though actual bushel returns would fall off. The December crop condition is reported to be 73.5 per cent. This is the third lowest in 65 years. It is interesting to note that the [illegible] was set to another depression when deflation was at its approximate worst. In 1921 the report of December wheat conditions was 76 per cent.

Boardroom Briefs

Brokers are of the opinion that many sore spots have been liquidated to a point where danger no longer threatens on the current rise. [illegible] Radio is said to be one instance where [illegible] [illegible] Administration is said to be considering the issuance of baby bonds to attract funds of hoarders. The "Street" thinks bonds of larger than usual denomination would do more good since [illegible] hoarding is the fault of the [illegible] fellow. [illegible] International [illegible] being considered by one [illegible] group on a setback. The same crowd is reported interested in the spring possibilities of aircraft shares.

A final word of caution to those who are willing to gamble on the rise going further is to use stops fairly close to Tuesday's closing prices.

California Edison Earns $2.53 Share

According to a preliminary annual report from John B. Miller, chairman Southern California Edison Company, Ltd., after providing for all operating expenses, taxes, depreciation, interest, and dividends on preferred stock, earned $2.53 per share on 3,009,574 shares, the average number of shares of common outstanding during the year 1931, as compared with $3.2? per share on 2,807,819 shares of common in 1930.

United Verde Shows $382,159 Net Loss

Net loss of United Verde Extension Mining Company for 1931 totaled $382,159 after depreciation as against a net loss of $1,113,860 after depreciation and depletion in 1930. Cost of producing copper in 1931 was 7.14 cents a pound before depreciation and not including Federal taxes.

Gemmer Mfg. 1931 Net Loss $230,103

Gemmer Manufacturing Co. for the year 1931 reports a net loss of $230,103 after charges and taxes. This compares with a net profit in 1930 of $265,455, equal to $1.45 a share on 100,000 shares of class B stock after dividend requirements on the $3 class A preferred stock.

MAINE MAN IS NEW SOCONY PRESIDENT

By FRANK H. MELOON

Frederick S. Fales, the newly elected president of Standard Oil Co. of New York, Inc., informs this writer he is a Maine man, born in Rockland Feb. 25, 1873. He was graduated from Phillips Academy, Andover, and from Amherst College. He began his career as a [illegible] for Libby, McNeil & Libby in Chicago, joining the Standard Oil forces in 1903.

The mills Col. Buxton's organization will operate are Edwards Mill of Augusta, Me., Androscoggin, Hill and Bates mills of Lewiston, Me., and the York Mill of Saco, Me. All five of these mills in which the Insull power interests have made large investments, form a closely affiliated group selling through Bliss Fabyan & Co.

When the prediction was made in this column three years ago that automobiles would eventually be operated with Diesel motors, numerous denials were forthcoming from automotive executives. That the vision of these executives was surprisingly narrow is shown by the fact that Dave Evans, the racing driver who used to provide thrills at the Rockingham speedway in New Hampshire, has recently completed a 1500-mile run for Indianapolis to Florida and return without having to refill the tank of his Diesel motor car.

Evans' trip merely marks another step in the progress of the expected Diesel development. He has run a loaded truck, weighing 12 tons, [illegible] more than 15,000 miles without refueling.

Another impetus to automobile sales in New England will come with the nearing holiday displays by our dealers on Washington's Birthday. This showing offers the year's second big sales drive, the first being the Boston Auto Show. The cumulative effect of such stimulants to sales is often an important market factor for the automobile shares, today more widely in the possession of the general public than ever before.

An important news item of the past week recorded the acquiring of Peerless control by General Motors interests. General Motors continues its record of expansion started under leadership of W. C. Durant, when he was familiarly known as the "Boston auto wizard." Mr. Durant is a descendant of the old Crapo family of New Bedford.

When the Locomobile Co. was recently sold for about $200,000 to satisfy a $1,000,000 mortgage, it was recalled that General Motors acquired its old "Mobile" plant, now one of General Motors' largest units, producing the Chevrolet. Locomobile was one of the few successful New England automobile makers, producing cars in Bridgeport. It was owned by Ami Barber, the "Asphalt King," who surfaced many of our early high-speed New England highways.

Another change just announced in the automobile industry's lineup was made when Continental Motors of Detroit submitted highest sealed bid for assets of Devaux Hall Motor Company which filed bankruptcy proceedings at Grand Rapids, Feb. 8. Continental would resume active operations of plant, which employs 500 men and awaits approval of federal district court to do so.

American Thermos to Cut Par Value

Stockholders of the American Thermos Bottle Co. at the annual meeting March 15 will vote on a proposal to reduce the par value of the Class "A" stock to $5 from $10. In a letter to stockholders, E. W. Edwards, chairman, and A. E. Payson, president, state that reduction of the par will increase surplus and enable directors to set up such reserves as they may believe to be desirable. This move will enable the company, it is said, to restate its assets and will not affect the priority of the preferred stock.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

EARNINGS of the public utility companies for 1931 which have come to hand thus far have been satisfactory to those watching [illegible] of the selling companies. Some of the companies have shown only moderate decreases from the results of 1930, which is considered good in view of general business conditions and the material reduction in industrial activity, which curtailed the use of light and power in the latter part of the year. Most of the concerns reported a sufficient amount of working capital.

Lima Locomotive's Financial Position

Lima Locomotive is one of the low priced stocks, which is the subject of [illegible] in some quarters. The company has felt the effects of the depressed stocks which is the subject of study in some quarters. The company has felt the effects of the low rate of buying, by railroads, but the financial position is strong. During 1931 the management purchased 25,000 shares of the stock, leaving only 186,057 outstanding. There are no bonds or preferred stock. At the present price of $13 the capital was selling for 2,418,741, against which the company held $2,006,733 in cash and $1,523,281 in marketable securities at the end of the year. Net working capital, with treasury stock value eliminated, was $6,775,276.

Ford Resumption Very Important

That the Ford resumption is likely to prove highly beneficial for business generally seems to be the growinb belief in the financial district and among some industrialists. In addition to giving employment to many thousands of workers, the renewal of activities of this important automobile maker will be reflected in the steel industry as well as in motor accessories. Advices regarding the placing of orders by Ford will be awaited with great interest in the coming weeks. It is felt that there will be considerable activity in the plants at first in connection with stocking the showrooms of dealers.

Air Reduction's 1931 Report

The report of Air Reduction for 1931 was better than most Wall Street estimates. The predictions had been that the final quarter would add about 80 cents a share, making about $4.25 for the year, whereas the actual results were $1.?? for the three months and $4.54 for 1931. The final quarter's earnings were only 12 cents under those for the same period of the previous year.

Mathieson Alkali's Fourth Quarter

While earnings of Mathieson Alkali fell off in the final quarter of 1931, interest in the company consider the showing satisfactory. It is pointed out that in each of the past five years there was some recession in the fourth quarter results as compared with the preceding three months. The earnings in the December period were 45 cents a share, compared with 53 cents in the previous quarter.

Study of Currency Bill Sobers Street

Corrective reaction in the stock market the past few days has afforded the financial community ample opportunity to study the various angles of the administration's new currency bill in a more sober light. Sentiment, too, appears to have been tempered to a large degree by private Washington opinion that the Federal Reserve liberization program was made imperative because of official apprehension that the Reconstruction Finance Corp. would be unable ot cope with the deluge of loan applications already before it.

Primary Object to "Avert Disaster"

These sources contend also that the primary object of the new legislation is not to inflate but to "avert disaster" and that it must not be assumed that anything resembling an "orgiastic loosening of credit is in prospect." Competent observers were agreed, however, that the near term aspect of the measure hold larger possibilities than the long terms.

Street Figures Show Large Short Interest

Discussion pro and con as to how big a portion of the short interest was eliminated by the violent advances late last week enlivened customer-room chatter. A survey conducted by an impartial agency based on the amount of borrowed stock returned to lenders as a result of the recovery attracted considerable attention in this connection. According to this canvass only about one-third of the short interest has been wiped out. The remainder of the open account, this interest finds, is stubborn in character and difficult to dislodge under existing circumstances.

LARGE ORDERS FOR MIDLAND

New York, Feb. 17—President E. J. Kulas, of Midland Steel Products Co., announces that the company has renewed contracts for 1932 with its largest customer of automobile truck frames. Production on this order is getting under way.

Midland Steel has completed arrangements with Denes & Friedman, Vienna, Austria, for the manufacture and sale of Midland Steeldraulic brake in Europe, says President Kulas.

The contract was concluded following negotiations between Midland officials and Albert Friedman, president of the Austrian company. Denes & Friedman is a well known European manufacturer and merchandiser of automotive parts, with plants in Austria, Germany and France.

According to Friedman, Europe is rapidly turning to the automobiles embodying standardized parts.

PRICES MIXED IN BOSTON DEALINGS

Prices were mixed in today's dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange with changes limited to narrow range. American Telephone lowered fractionally after working up over a point in early trading.

Atchison dropped a minor fraction to 88⅞, while New Haven added a fraction at 29⅛. Pennsylvania sold unchanged from previous closing levels. General Electric was slightly higher at 23½.

Boston Elevated, Edison Electric, Boston & Maine prior preferred and American Founders were firm around previous closing prices. First National Stores was strong, advancing nearly 2 points to 52⅛. United Shoe added ½ at 39½.

Mergenthaler, Reece Button Hole Machinery and Gillette were at slightly lower levels.

Washington study made public today shows production of shoes in Massachusetts in December totaled 3,818,430 pairs, afainst 3,248,980 pairs in December 1930, an increase of about 17½ per cent. Total production for 1931 was 72,793,702 pairs, against 69,510,470 pairs for 1930, an increase of nearly 5 per cent.

In connection with issuance of 2000 class A shares as a stock dividend, New England Grian Products Refining Co., has filed with the Massachusetts Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation balance sheet as of Dec. 31, 1931, as follows:

Air Brake Is to Cut Its Capital Setup

At the annual meeting March 9, a proposal will be submitted to New York Air Brake Co. stockholders to reduce issued capital stock to 260,000 from 500,000 shares by retiring 40,000 shares now held in the treasury, and to reduce authorized stock to 460,000 shares from 500,000 shares.

Current assets as of December 31 last, including $1,474,529 cash and marketable securities, amounted to $2,535,371 and current liabilities were $168,179. This compares with cash and marketable securities of $2,137,250, current assets of $3,845,223 and current liabilities of $491,925 at the close of 1930.

Honolulu Oil Corp. Reports Net Loss

Honolulu Oil Corp., Ltd., reports for the year 1931 a net loss of $171,853 after depreciation, depletion, taxes and intangible drilling costs. This compares with a net profit of $2,120,472, equal to $2.24 a share on 944,315 shares of common in 1930.

SPECTATOR Says:

The stock market has certainly proved that last week's rebound was no flash in the pan, and by exceeding the best levels of the move has placed itself in a position to record further substantial progress before encountering any effective resistance on the upside.

Chart Data

With the stock list for once apparently living up to chart prognostications, traders are busily groping through their records in an effort to learn just where the advance should carry on this current phase. It is pointed out that the market has already established a triple bottom, namely on December 17, January 5, and February 10.

Following a selling climax like that of December 17, the stock list theoretically may sustain a 50 per cent recovery of the net losses of the previous selling movement without indicating that the trend has been reversed. This would cover the decline from the November 9 highs to the December 17 lows.

Recovery Measured

Thus far, a 50 per cent recovery has not been experienced. As measured by the Dow-Jones industrial averages, such a rebound would carry the index to 95.47; the rails to 43.89, and theh utilities to 37.39. At yesterday's peak levels, the industrials were at 86.51, the rails at 40.66, and the utilities at 35.76.

Even though fundamentals do not warrant the assumption that the bear market has definitely terminated, technical conditions could easily bring about a further advance approximating some seven points in the industrials and gains of lesser extent in the rails and utilities.

Bullish Indicator

The most bullish indicator at the moment is the heavy expansion in turnover. Momentum might easily carry beyond even the most optimistic expectations.

Dividends

Mergenthaler Linotype Co. declared a 75-cent quarterly dividend, or a $3 annual rate for the stock which had been on a $6 basis. Directors stated that financial condition of the company is sound in every respect, but no definite improvement as yet is indicated in trade conditions affecting the company's business.

Central Public Service Corporation omitted class A dividend due at this time. In previous quarter company paid 1¼ per cent in stock on the class A.

STOCKS MIXED WITH SELLING MODERATE

New York, Feb. 17—Price changes for important shares were mixed in today's trading on the New York Stock Exchange. The opening was firm, but moderate profit-taking appeared during the initial hour.

In the second period the issues that had been recessional moved up from their earlier lows.

SOME ISSUES HIGHER

Among issues selling with net gains of a point or better in the second period were First National Stores, McKeesport Tin Plate, Lambert, Beatrice Creamery and General Cigars.

Issues off a point or more net at the same time included U. S. Steel, American Can, Consolidated Gas of New York, American Telephone, Electric Auto-Lite, International Business Machines, North American and Wesetern Union.

Union Pacific sold down 3 points as new profit-taking appeared.

Railroad bankers said keener interest was being shown in the prospects for improvement in the transportation industry. Today's carloadings statement, showing a gain for the week of 13,599 cars, was a little better than seasonal. Resumption of production by Ford, it was said, should stimulate transportation still further.

The steel industry is also basing its hopes for improvement on revival of long deferred buying orders from the carriers.

It was reported there has been no indication that the roads are ready to close contracts calling for major purchases of equipment, but steel manufacturers expressed a degree of cheerfulness over increased inquiries from the roads.

IMPROVEMENT OUTLOOK

Decline in steel production rate to 27 per cent, compared with 28 per cent one week ago, had been largely anticipated. Improvement from this level, it was said, would largely depend upon the size of expected Ford orders, and the steel industry, as well as motor industry, is eagerly awaiting an opportunity to measure the volume of prospective Ford business.

Foreign markets were steady to firm in early trading. Metal prices were higher. Sterling cables were quoted at $3.44¾, off ⅛ cent.

Selected sections of the Curb Market were able to record further moderate price progress in forenoon dealings today, although scattered profit-taking along the line made for some irregularity.

Electric Bond and Share was churned over in large blocks, pushing ahead to 13⅝ for a gain of ⅝ on reports that a recapitalization was to be made, whereby one new share would be exchanged for three of the present shares, thereby reducing the outstanding stock.

ALLEGHANY TO SELL STOCK

New York, Feb. 17—The Alleghany Corp. has arranged for the sale of a substantial amount of its railroad common stock holdings to the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, unofficial reports stated today.

The securities to be transferred include 46,200 shares of Pere Marquette at $11 per share and a four-year option to purchase 215,000 000 shares Erie, each at $18.25 a share. All the properties included in the transaction are controlled by the Van Sweringen interests.

In payment for the acquired stocks Chesapeake & Ohio has issued $3,950,000 of 6 per cent notes dated Feb. 1, 1932, and maturing Jan. 31, 1934, to the Alleghany Corporation. Reports said that the Alleghany had resold these notes privately for the purpose of raising cash in order to meet certain bank loans.

EXCHANGE SEAT UP $19,000

New York, Feb. 17 (AP)—The price of stock exchange seats took another jump today, a membership being arranged for sale at $175,000 or $19,000 above the previous sale.

Since the end of last week values have risen $40,000 and from the low price of the year, they have advanced more than $50,000.

The sensational upswing of the last few days, brokers say, is largely the result of sharp advance in prices and the great increase in stock market activity after the announcement last week of the administration's plans to amend the federal reserve act to ease the credit situation.

Gains in Hardware Sales Shown

New York, Feb. 17—Current reports from the leading hardware market centers indicate that the trade levels of January are being fairly well maintained Hardware Age will say tomorrow in its weekly market summary. Retail sales in the larger cities are showing better gains and their replacement buying is more active than from most rural districts. Optimism is more pronounced in the New England states than in most other sections of the country.

While the government prepares to wage a fight against the widespread hoarding of money, with a program intended to instill confidence in the financial structure, business men have been enabled to draw some currency back into circulation by offering exceptional bargains.

Close students of market conditions are of the opinion that prevailing prices on some hardware lines are at the irreducible minimum. These executives have expressed the belief that a recovery will mean additional profits for courageous buyers who will anticipate their requirements as far in advance as safety warrants.

Conn. Utility's Budget Larger

Construction budget of the Connecticut Light & Power Company for 1932 will approximate $3,400,000 or nearly $1,000,000 more than was spent for similar projects in 1931. Large capital expenditures will be required this year for extension and improvement of the distribution system as against relatively small expenditures for generation and producton facilities.

New General Electric Plant

Bridgeport, Feb. 17—Chicago Hotpoint division of the General Electric Company is being transferred to this city. The change is expected to raise local employment by about 3500 workers.

New Hat Factory for Danbury

Danbury, Ct., Feb. 17—Neumann-Endler, Inc., is to open a factory here for hat making. It will be the only local plant making woolen hats and one of the few so engaged in the United States.

German Gold Coverage Up

Berlin, Feb. 17 (AP)—The Reichsbank's gold devisen (foreign exchange) coverage on February 15 was further improved .07 per cent to 25.8 per cent, it was announced today. Contraction of note circulation by 120,900,000 marks (about $29,016,000) and a gold and foreign exchange decrease of 2,218,000 marks (about $531,320) were cited.

American Solvents Plan Given

New York, Feb. 17 (AP)—A reorganization plan for the American Solvents & Chemical Corporation, adopted by the committee headed by Joseph P. Ripley, vice-president of the National City Bank, provides for the raising of new cash of $1,650,000 through the sale of certain idle properties and $731,600 to be realized through an offering of 133,000 shares of common stock in the new company.

Capitalization of the new company will consist of $3,890,000 par value of preference stock and 207,412 shares of common.

American Woolen Unit at 100 P. C.

In a series of comments by local business men concerning conditions in their lines, the following appeared:

"In the industrial field, J. G. Ellis, work-manager of American Woolen Company's Bradford Mill, said: 'We are operating on a 100 per cent basis, employing 340 people and shipping our product all over the country. Manufacturers of bathing suits whom we supply with woolen yarn are taking their full quota of raw materials, planning on a return to business normalcy by the opening of the bathing season. These firms are among our most conservative customers.'"

Cure for Pessimism Found, Says President Bowker

By W. S. COUSINS

New York, Feb. 17 (INS)—"I believe we have finally found the cure for the unrestrained and unreasoning pessimism which has been throwing the whole world out of focus and that the turn in the business tide will be able to recognize it," said Horace Bowker, president of the American Agricultural Chemical Co. to International News Service today.

"The reason many are pessimistic at this time," he said, "has very obviously been the necessity required to offset the inflationary bubble which burst with calamitous results in 1929. Once confidence is restored we can look for reasonably prompt improvement, though the rate recovery will be slow."

In analyzing business conditions, Bowker pointed out that the heavy chemical industry, which constituted one-quarter of the total volume of his concern, had held up surprisingly well, both as to the distribution of products and the prices which consumers are willing to pay.

The most hopeful indications for the fertilizer business, as well as other important lines catering directly to the farmers' necessities, according to Mr. Bowker, have been the growing firmness of the so-called cash crops and the increasing demand for wheat, corn and cotton in the home markets.

"The trouble with all great deflation movements is that they almost invariably run to extremes," said Mr. Bowker. "Hence deflation ultimately becomes utter rout, as fear overtakes bankers, business men and manufacturers. Having over-deflated America to the extent of the over-inflation of 1929, we are now ready to begin to assume a normal and sensible economic course once more. Capital will readily be attracted to the newly-created credit mechanism, the reconstruction finance corporation.

"This two-billion-dollar corporation will in turn provide credit for needy commercial or industrial borrowers. As business feels the beneficial effects of this influx of new credit, paralysis and fear will be overcome to an extent which is disproportionate to the amount of money actually involved.

"We hear it said that this is the beginning of a new inflation. But inflation is a relative term. We need inflation to offset the excessive deflation that has already taken place. Some inflation is necessary to restore business to a state of balance and health.

"The test will be whether we can keep inflation from running past the red light next time. I think we as a country have learned our lesson. We are not likely to be burned twice, at least by the same kind of fire."

Mr. Bowker warns against the well-intentioned efforts of political and economic leaders to "ballyhoo" the country out of the depression. In the long run, he said, such efforts will produce no lasting results, and may in some cases actually delay the recovery.

"For the first time since 1921," Mr. Bowker declared," bankers and economists are recognizing the pre-eminence of agricultural purchasing power as a leverage out of the depression.

"America was built upon a political economy recognizing that the prosperity of the farmer is essential to the prosperity of the country as a whole, and I am greatly encouraged by the many signs of increasing stability in the great industry of agricultural production."

MARKET VIEWS OF BROKERS

Shields & Co.—The speed of the advance leaves the list in a very vulnerable position when the new banking law has been passed and there no longer is good news to sustain enthusiasm so for the time being a cautious trading policy is advisable.

Whitney & Elwell—There is nothing inflationary in making Government obligations available as collateral behind Federal Reserve notes. Governments have been eligible for rediscount the same as commercial paper. Why then should they not be also eligible for note collateral? They are safer than commercial paper and fully as liquid. At the same time there would be no need to use them as collateral if there was enough eligible paper, which there isn't. Incidentally, the great strength of Government bonds is probably due to the fact that they are to be eligible as collateral.

D. M. Collins & Co.—There is no denying the importance of the market action; the undertone is good and the line of least resistance certainly appears upward, despite the fact that there is no real constructive news.

Hemphill, Noyes & Co.—We feel that the recovery is due to go further in today's session.

Russell, Miller & Co.—Obviously a feeling of optimism is so new an experience that it will take time for Wall Street to get accustomed to it. Consequently, the current rally is meeting with a great deal of stubborn bear opposition and a rather widespread feelin gof cynical doubt and uncertainty.

Hornblower & Weeks—On strength up to noon we would take profits and await developments. We continue to warn against expecting too much in the way of trading reactions, believing that the market will not accommodate those who do so.

McCall Estimates Results for 1932

William Warner, president of McCall Corp., told stockholders at the annual meeting that company's forecast indicates profits in 1932 will be substantially the same as in 1931. Forecast of profits for 1932 in $1,500,000, as against $1,603,000 earned in 1930. He added:

"Our actual 1931 operations ran only 5 per cent behind our estimate for that year. This was the first time our results were under our forecast. Whatever changes there have been since the end of 1931 have been a little more helpful."

NATION AGOG OVER FRISBY WELCOME PLANS

Everywhere in these United States are groups of people whispering, chattering, some of them giggling a little with nervous excitement, but all busy—busy with plans for the welcoming home of Manchuria's Miracle Man, Horace W. Frisby. Details are not complete, but it is thought that after the Girl Scouts have told Mr. Frisby what they think of him, he will be whisked away through the noonday crowds to his suite at the municipal auto camp. There he will greet each of his admirers with some appropriate Manchurian phrase—in English, out of consideration for those who do not happen to understand Manchurian. After he has opened all the presents brought him, and done the tissue paper and ribbon up into neat bundles for next Christmas, he will take his nap, while outside thousands chant:

"Good morning to you,
Good morning to you.
Good morning, Horace Frisby,
Good morning to you."

Best Remedy for Cough Is Easily Mixed at Home

You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough due to a cold can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in millions of homes, because it gives more prompt, positive relief than anything else. It's so true, too, at all to mix and costs but a trifle.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey to make a full pint. This saves two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough medicine, and gives you a purer, better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes good—children like it.

You can actually feel its penetrating, soothing action on the inflamed throat membranes. It is also absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes. At the same time, it promptly loosens the germ-laden phlegm. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief even in those severe coughs which follow cold epidemics.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest medicinal agents for severe coughs and bronchial irritations.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

Snapshots at Random!

A week's ramble around town . . . In and out of speaks . . . Dreary hours at drearier night clubs . . . A jaunt through Harlem . . . A night in the Village . . . Hasty moments in Broadway restaurants snatching hasty meals . . . Half a night in a friend's penthouse, looking out of the window over the restless East River . . . And a visit to the top-piece of the haughty Chrysler Building to stare down at the ant-like army of humans surging in and out of the thread-like avenues . . . A terrific humility oppresses me . . . A puff of wind could lift me up and dash me down into the very midst of those milling mites below and then what? . . . A minute's excitement for the crowd . . . A newspaper headline for one or two editions . . . A new Broadway reporter to take my place and then . . . oblivion . . . ugh! . . . All you God's chilluns with inflated heads go up to the top of one of our skyscrapers and look down . . . It's good for you . . . It'll subdue your ego.

The statue of the saint at the back entrance of St. Benedict's Church at 58th and Eights ave. . . . Up until a few weeks ago I used to study it as it clutched its sacred cross serenely and benevolently . . . And just the other day I passed and its head is gone . . . A depressing sight, now, this decapitated saint, and I trust the church officials will do something about it

We drift into the Club El Patio Friday night merely to gaze into the slumbrous eyes of the Latinic-featured Rosita, who's really Celtic, in the hope of starting an argument with the Mexican Ramon, but instead settle down and watch Dorothy Parker seated at a table with the Donald Ogden Stewarts . . . An unusual gal—and a brilliant one — this Parker lass, and legends have sprung up around Broadway regarding the fertility of her wit and the lash of her repartee . . . We hover near in the mad hope of snatching a paragraph gem . . . But the Parker-Stewart chatter is subdued . . . At another table the impressively titled Grand Duchess Marie of Russia and nearby, Fifi Widener (Mrs. Milton Holden), and Alex Wakefield . . .

A premiere of note Tuesday night . . . Jed Harris' production of "The Fatal Alibi," at the Booth, a mild, genial mystery play with an inoffensive murder and a lovable detective, Charles Laughton . . . Ada May and Edgar McGregor pass by on their way to another play . . . A new romance, this . . . In a seat in rear row, a handsome gent, who's been infected with the first-night virus lately . . . Gene Tunney, of former pugilistic and Social Register eminence . . . Grover Whalen, head erect, and carnation missing, passed down the aisle . . . The usually immaculately-clad, clean-shaven Walter Wanger beams . . . Lillian Gish droops delightfully in gray, and Fannie Hurst is pensive for a few seconds preceding the rise of the curtain . .

Later, at Will Oakland's Terrace . . . An intimate place which Broadway proper rarely frequents, but which lures heavy patronage from so-called home folks, who gape with awe at the undressed gals of the chorus and shiver at the thought of their own daring in watching the shapely Frances Mildern weave through her exciting thigh-twisting dance...Dr. Nat Llef enters accompanied by the frail, blonde June O'Day, a fragrant beauty of the stage...Later, at the Ballyhoo, where Jean Malin and William (Stage) Boyd heckle the quick-witted Jack White...And still later, at the Club Calais, one of the few remaining all-night spots...Saturday night at the Village Barn...Thirty youngsters in their finest evening bibs and tuckers enter and trot around the floor in the most approved collegiate manner, which is nothing more or less than hugging your gal until she gets red in the face, then releasing her, putting your arm around her shoulders and walking in time—or out—with the music until she recovers her breath... Whereupon you grab her anew, whirl her madly about the floor until she is ready to swoon, when you release her again and walk again, always being sure to keep right on talking.

At a George Washington party at Harry Green's penthouse Wednesday night . . . The Hebraic-panned Green as a Minute Man of the Revolution tosses Odette Myrtil, the "Cat and the Fiddle" star, into convulsions until Mr. Sobol dons a Daniel Boone hunting suit and a powdered peruke . . . The Myrtle gal faints dead away then . . . At the Palace, Saturday night . . . Sophie Tucker's return . . . The red-hot mamma in a shimmering, Autumn-brown dress, which dazzles the eyes—but it's the same grand old voice and grand old Tucker manner . . . The chocolate-hued Bill Robinson, over 50, with the agility and enthusiasm of a 20-year-old lad, brings down the house with his amazing speed tap-dancing . . . Snapshots, The Album of Manhattan.

Unemployment Insurance

Plan for an Employers' Fund

A commission appointed by the governors of six of the great industrial states of this country has recommended the adoption of a system of unemployment insurance for the protection of people who are thrown out of work by circumstances and conditions over which they have no control.

Reduced to a few words, this plan suggests that the employers contribute an amount equal to two per cent of their payroll to an unemployment fund. In a time of unemployment, the worker would be paid from this fund $10 a week for a period not to exceed 10 weeks in any year.

The states represented on the commission which evolved this suggestion are New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Connecticut and Massachusetts.

The plan presupposes that the average normal man will work if he can find work. In Germany, where a similar plan has been tried and is still in force, they will tell you that the employer's interest in his workers must not cease when the day's work ends. There exists between them a moral obligation for the employer to continue his concern for the employe when the latter is deprived of his ordinary income.

The worker has little or no control over industry. He can not open and he can not close the factory. Yet he pays heavily for the losses of bad management, either in wage cuts or total loss of his own employment. It is the employer who controls and conducts the business. The responsibility of providing a continuing income for faithful employes rests with him.

The plan of unemployment insurance produced by this commission is admitted by the commission to be "extremely modest and moderate." The commission was determined "not to impose any onerous burden of cost on American industry."

The value of the plan is that it proposes a start. The American working people can now watch with interest the response it will receive from employers.

'Strangling Army and Navy'

Serious Indictment of Administration

"The hand of economy at Washington is strangling the life out of the American Army and Navy."

That very serious indictment of the Hoover Administration, which the country now knows to be as accurate as it is grave, was made here in Boston by Wayne Davis of the American Legion, who has been our guest along with National Commander Stevens.

Gen. Fox Conner said at the dinner given to Commander Stevens by Governor Ely that the defense forces of the United States are being emasculated at the behest of silly pacifists who are unmindful of history and human nature and who do not recognize the unsettled conditions among the nations of the world today.

These men of the Legion like Stevens and Davis and these men of the army like Fox Conner have been through war. They know its dangers, horrors and miseries. They do not want war again; nor does any sane man.

And they have sense enough to know, being practical men, the unfailing truth of Gen. Washington's counsel that to be prepared for war is the safest insurance against the possibility of war. It is not the strong boy but the weak, defenseless boy in the schoolyard who is invariably assaulted by the bully.

China and India, with their 720,000,000 people unable to defend themselves adequately, are object lessons in silly pacifism which patriotic and understanding Americans are determined must not be imposed upon their beloved country.

Let Us Help Ourselves

An appropriation by the national government of $4,800,000 to improve Boston Harbor has been recommended by Major-General Lytle Brown, chief of the United States Army Engineers.

Generally, the plan of these experts is to widen and deepen the main ship channel from President Roads through the harbor to Commonwealth Pier.

General Brown says that our commerce in the port of Boston has increased from 9,000,000 tons in 1919 to 19,000,000 in 1929.

We are a major Atlantic seaport, he acknowledges. Massachusetts has expended $22,000,000 for development of this harbor and port and the national government obviously has the duty to keep the channel open at all times to the great trans-Atlantic liners and naval vessels of deepest draught.

You can get no better opinion on this subject than the Army Engineers. Now that they have spoken in our behalf, let us do something for ourselves. Mayor Curley, the Boston Chamber of Commerce, the Maritime Association and all other organizations and all citizens interested in promoting the best interests of our greatest New England seaport should send their delegations to Washington. In no other way than by our own presence, perhaps, can we prevail upon the members of Congress to adopt the scientific and impartial recommendation of the engineering experts.

Judge Cardozo Elevated

In nominating Benjamin N. Cardozo for the existing vacancy on the Supreme Court of the United States, President Hoover has done well.

As Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals of the State of New York, Judge Cardozo has achieved an eminence which is unequalled by any holder of judicial office in the United States. In addition to his attainments in the law, he is a distinguished man of letters, with an unrivaled power of vigorous and pellucid writing. His career is one of the glories of the legal profession of today. The respect in which he is held by all lawyers and judges is profound and unique.

The transfer to the highest court of the land of his poise, moral rectitude, broad and liberal philosophy of life and human relations, intellectual integrity, as well as power of mind, cannot fail to enrich the Supreme Court and strengthen its hold upon public respect.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Don't Get Around to It!

THIS PITIFUL suffering all around us—not only now, but all the time!

People out of work for months. Children going on half rations. Homes breaking up. Other cruelties and injustices.

Thousands of people drudging through life without ever having a break! Youngsters working in factories and mills! Men being hunted to death in electric chairs—hung by the neck—lynched!

Things like that, going on ever since we were born, make us sick when we think of them—make us furious!

Millions of decent American citizens, like you and me, getting sick and furious over these terrible conditions, talking, waving our arms, saying that something ought to be done—

We could get together. We could hold mass meetings. Decide on a course of action. Contribute money. Cast votes. Get busy and clean up the whole mess.

Something could be done. It would take time, and a lot of energy; but it could be done. And this earth in which we live, and in which our children are to live after us, would be a decent place—a fair and friendly place—a place we could be proud of.

Then why isn't that something done? Why don't we get busy and do it?

Are we bad? Are we cruel? Do we like to see people suffer?

No, we aren't—and we don't. We are not really wicked, but we just don't get around to attending to things like that.

Sympathetic? Sure. Hate to see misery, and when it comes right under our nose—then we get excited.

But the rest of the time—we just forget, and put it off.

We're so busy with our own affairs. And we're so comfortable.

Of course, we haven't everything we'd like to have; but we're warm; we're fed. Our worst bills are paid, and if little Benny falls sick we can afford to call a doctor.

So, although we're just as warm-hearted as anyone, we somehow can't realize that people the starving—actually starving—or huddled homeless out in the rain, or dying for lack of a warm room and simple nursing.

Yes, we hear about those things; but they don't seem real. They're like something happening in Persia, or Bolivia, or some make-believe, story-book place like that.

It's just that it somehow doesn't seem real.

And so, we forget.

We'd certainly feel mighty indignant if anyone called us MURDERERS. Yes, we certainly would. And yet—

Does the man dying in the gutter or in the electric chair get our fine distinctions?

Does it help him to know that we are really perfectly lovely people who honestly didn't mean to let him die?

He's dead just the same, isn't he? AND WHO'S TO BLAME?

New York Day by Day

Movie for the Elite

NEW YORK, Feb. 17—A movie for elegantees in the upper social brackets has become a whopping success along the Gold Coast. Called the Plaza and located in the fashionable East Fifties, it is the only neighborhood cinema to flaunt an automobile starter caparisoned in gold braid.

The proprietor changes from afternoon attire to tuxedo after dark and the lady in the ticket cage appears decollete. At the curb is always a line of motor cars with livened chauffeurs and not infrequently the companionate footman. Admission is a dollar.

Programs are confined solely to pictures—current news shots, a travel short, a Mickey Mouse and a feature picture. The feature is usually one seen on Broadway a few weeks before. In the late afternoon tea is served in the basement salon by silver buckled butlers.

Seating capacity is around 1200 and the last dozen rows slope upward and are for men and women who smoke.

There are flapper debutantes, lorgnetted dowagers and the like from the mansions, apartment houses and de luxe hotels nearby. Many have attended dinner parties and want to kill a little time before going to night clubs. Nearly all are on speaking acquaintance.

Now and then an untouchable wanders in but as a rule is so smothered by starchy diffidence that he sneaks out and does not come back. The amusing display of affectations is as pronounced as usual among "those who belong." Such as "Fawncy, meeting you heah," and la de dah.

I sat behind an ermined creature squired by a stiffly accented British lad. A news shot of Queen Marie of Roumania was shown. Said the lady, to all about might hear: "Marie is such a dear. Seeing her reminds me I have not answered her last letter." My mental reply was anticipated in the next comedy, titled "Nuts."

Phil Baker was long-distanced on tour the other day that a company in which he was a big stockholder was "going through the wringer." At the conclusion, the impish Baker cried: "That's what I call wafting swell tidings"—and hung up.

Gay Ninety memories of rainy day skirts and gilt rolling pins were recalled on the avenue today. A gallant, wearing a spurious bloom of the barber shop, swung out of East 51st street sporting a bright purple Ascot tie. The Ascot, in popular thought, has been relegated to the shelf of fashiondom cluttered with celluloid collars, yet it looked extremely smart. In fact, "durn smurt."

* * *

The first Ascot I ever beheld was a vivid red, and adorned Fred Fester, who came from the city to grace the reception desk of our leading hotel, a fine figure with a middle part in wavy and prematurely silver hair. He seemed as sure of himself as a cockerel bishop and was the first man in town to have his nails done and sport a ribbon watch fob.

Speaking of neckties, the neatest description I ever read was by the late Charles R. Barnes. He was telling of an obnoxious fellow who was finally throttled by a gentlman he was annoying. "He choked him," wrote Barnes, "until his tongue stuck out like a pink plush tie."

From the president of an Iowa college: "It would seem Robert H. (Rob) Davis has discovered every writer of consequence before the public, save you."

That accounts for his enormous popularity and clear conscience.

Just Folks

The Wise or the Kind Act

He had been fooled so many times
He thought to closer watch his dimes.
It bothered him at night to think
Sometimes his money went for drink,
And those who begged for meat and bread
Weren't all as hungry as they said.
Henceforth for every kindly deed
He'd first investigate the need.

Upon the next who asked for bread
He coldly stared and shook his head,
And then was troubled all day long
By wondering was he right or wrong
And wishing, wrong or right, that he
Had harkened to the poor man's plea.
Said he: "Since proof must be deferred,
One should take hunger at its word.

"He treads a dubious path who tries
At once to be both kind and wise;
For children cold and weak and ill
Can't always bide their time until
Some calm committee person comes
To count their fingers, toes and thumbs,
And hungry men can't always wait
Till donors shrewd investigate."

Hamlet With Hamlet Left Out

—By Claude G. Bowers—

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Boston Evening American.

MOST OF US had assumed that Lincoln's birthday was made a national non-partisan legal holiday that tribute may be paid to him; but looking over the newspaper reports of the dinners and celebrations, it appears that it is not Lincoln, but the Republican party of today, for whom the day has been set aside. Members of the Cabinet and Senator Watson, Republican leader in the Senate, fared forth with their speeches in manuscript, after copies had been left with the Republican National Committee for distribution by that eminent Lincolnian, Mr. Lucas. These took up many columns of the papers. In reading these speeches one has difficulty in fin ing much about Lincoln.

While Lincoln's name was on the menu cards, it was Hoover's name that was on the lips of the orators.

A suspicious soul might conclude that the plan was to slip Lincoln from the pedestal and substitute Mr. Hoover—without any one noticing the change. But the features, as well as the principles and philosophy, of the two men, are so glaringly different that most of us caught the substitution at once. They neither look nor act alike. Lincoln believed that "the principles of Jefferson are the definitions and the axioms of a free society."

Hoover Big Figure; Lincoln Only Casual

The keynote sentence of most of these panegyrics of Mr. Hoover—for Mr. Lincoln was only mentioned casually—was that he is the greatest of our leaders; and one Under-Secretary, in the intoxication of his rhetoric, pronounced him the "leader of the world." Another reminded us that he is an "expert"—and that was painfully reminiscent of 1928, when, through expert management, we were going to "eliminate poverty," after the experts from the days of Harding had "put business on the basis of permanent prosperity." It worked once—why not again? There were a few notes, that fairly shrieked in 1928, that were strangely missing. Nothing was said about "a chicken in every pot" or "sanitary plumbing." And we missed, too, Charles Evans Hughes' rather smug question, put to a New York audience that year—"Would you entrust the business and prosperity of the country to the Democrats?"

Lincoln was shunted off to the wings; and it was not Mr. Hoover, the President, who was toasted—it was Mr. Hoover, Republican candidate for President.

An After-Thought of Party Policy

We were impressed with one statement by Senator Watson:

"There seems to be an obsession in certain quarters here that Europe should settle America's problems, while America should settle Europe's debts. Such is not the conception of the President of the United States and such action will never meet with his approval."

Perhaps this is an afterthought of party policy.

M. Laval, after his secret conferences with Mr. Hoover, returned to France with an assurance to his people that there would be a scaling down or "cancellation" of the debts. That is the impression Laval got from his conversations.

Then came the President's proposal to recreate the War Finance Corporation. Why? To consider the debt problem. To recommend an increase in the debts? Of course not. What, if not to "consider capacity to pay" and to recommend another reduction in the debts with another increase of the burdens of our people?

Senator Watson did not see fit to explain that recommendation; or the more frank recommendation of Secretary Mellon in his resport to Congress.

Congress, and most all of Congress, was so firmly convinced that the President did plan either another reduction or the transfer of the whole debt to our own people, that in passing the moratorium measure the Democratic House, over the grumbling from Administration quarters, put in the amendment making it plain that we would not transfer the debts of other nations to our own people.

That was a vote of "no confidence" in the Administration.

Now Europe Wears Its Mourning Garb

And when the Democratic House took that American stand for American rights and American interests, what was the effect in Europe?

When Laval returned to Paris, from his secret conferences with the President, he was received most rapturously on the boulevards—for every one was delighted with the understanding as to the debts, as Laval understood it.

The European press was pleased—quite generally; and there was blithesome optimism in the papers.

And then the Democratic House went on record in behalf of the American taxpayers—and the European press took on the habiliments of mourning, and the European editorial writers made bitter attacks against us.

The Administration has been against the "cancellation" of the debt since the American people spoke through Congress.

Watson in Same Boat With Hoover

It is common knowledge in Washington and in Indiana that Senator Watson is not an ardent admirer of the President.

That he does not think him a great leader.

That he does not really see the resemblance to Lincoln.

But the Senator is up for reelection this Fall; and he must run under the leadership, and on the "achievements" and the record of the Administration; and he cannot hope to win, if Mr. Hoover loses. However uncongenial the companionship, the Senator finds himself in the same boat with the Administration and knows they must float or sink together.

"Expert Government" Guesses Wrong Again

Meanwhile the Administration of "experts" and "engineers of government" has gone, in the person of Ogden Mills, to the Ways and Means Committee of the House, and admitted that it underestimated revenues to the extent of another half billion.

After three years of "expert" government by "the only people fit to govern," the Administration goes to the Democratic House and says that in one year we must so tax the people, all of whom are desperately suffering financially, to raise not only the stupendous amount normally required, but to raise almost one billion and a half more to meet a deficit of one billion and a half.

Mr. Crisp, acting Democratic leader, went immediately to the House, transmitted the tragic information, and putting country first, declared that the money must be raised through the most drastic taxation through which every one must suffer. But he added:

"This deficit is the deficit of a Republican Administration."
